Reconsideration by the Senate Labor Committee of pending defense labor bills in the light of drastic House regulatory action was indicated last night by members of the prolabor Senate group.

The committee received jurisdiction over the House-approved labor bill as heads of both major labor organizations condemned the measure as "repressive" and "a vicious instrument of oppression."

Senate Majority Whip Lister Hill promised "expeditious action" on the House bill and other committeemen predicted reexamination and probable tightening of the Ball bill already reported for the Senate.

The more moderate Ball and Connally measures are slated for Senate consideration Monday, but study of the House bill may force a delay.

Committee Chairman Elbert Thomas was out of town but Vice President Wallace's reference of the bill to the Senate labor group placed it in the hands of a committee already on record against legislation "regarded by a majority of either employes or employers as unfair, unnecessarily harsh or punitive in its effects on them."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, immediately branded the Smith bill as such.

Green called the bill America's "first move toward totalitarianism" and declared that the A. F. of L. will never "submit to restriction of the right to strike by law." Green said no law "is superior to the guarantees of freedom contained in the Constitution."

President Murray said all pending

Accidentally Shot, Texan Just Coughs Up the Bullet

Fort Worth, Dec. 4 (AP). — "I coughed this up," D. M. Wood, 44, told hospital attendants, exhibiting a .32-caliber bullet. "I didn't like the taste of lead."

Wood explained he was investigating a noise at his place 45 miles from Fort Worth and his pistol dropped to the floor, discharging once. He drove to Fort Worth.

The bullet entered the chest, and ranged upward, missing lungs, vital veins and arteries, and lodged in the throat.

"This couldn't happen again in a million tries," one doctor said, predicting Wood would be out of the hospital in two or three days.

Sudden Riches Of Defense 'Broker' Aired

Subcontracts Netted Him $212,891, House Investigators Are Told

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Apparently without the benefit of standard manufacturing equipment—either factory or office, in his own name—Leon R. Shanack, a "defense broker" of New York City, managed nevertheless to pile up $212,891 in profits received or anticipated from munitions subcontracts, a House Military Affairs investigating committee was told yesterday.

The committee's public hearing learned furthermore that the Shanack fortunes grew by leaps and bounds—in lumps ranging from 25 to over 100 per cent of what the Federal Government may be expected to pay the Remington Arms Co. as part of the cost of operation of United States owned small arms ammunition plants.

After it had heard this, H. Ralph Burton, chief investigator for the committee headed by Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, stood up in the hearing room and called for "Mr. Shanack."

Fails to Appear

Shanack, who had been served with a committee subpena to appear as a witness in its investigation of the profits of defense brokers, failed to respond.

Reached later in New York, he told Burton by long-distance telephone that his failure to appear was due to a misunderstanding, that he had no intention of evading subpena and that he was perfectly willing to testify whenever the committee desired.

Gordon K. Miller, committee investigator, and other witnesses, however, gave the committee a word picture of Shanack, whose activities are viewed as typical of the defense program's "middlemen" and "profit patriots," operations which the committee expects to expose during hearings, recessed yesterday, but expected to be resumed in about a week.

The witnesses spoke of Shanack's inclination for lavish entertainments, his playing host to Remington Arms officials at the Louis-Nova prize fight, his big car and chauffeur, his habit of carrying as much

Dies Scans America First Roll for Nazis

Committee's Agents Given Access to Files; Grand Jury Expects To Hear Fish Today

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Hunting for Nazis and Nazi influence, agents of the House Committee on un-American Activities are combing the membership lists, letter files and other records of the America First Committee's national organization.

Huge quantities of material taken by the agents from the Chicago headquarters of the anti-interventionist group have been sent to Washington for analysis, The Post learned last night.

The committee chairman, Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, confirmed the fact that the America First Committee was under investigation.

All of Records Called For

"There are two important things we want to determine," Dies said:

"First, how many members of America First also are members of bunds, the German-American Alliance and other questionable or downright subversive organizations.

"Second, just how strong is the influence of the Nazi minority in the councils of the America First local and national councils.

"In order to make this important inquiry we called on the America First leadership to produce all their records, of every sort. The America First membership lists will be compared with those of pro-German groups in our possession—lists of people against whom the suspicion of Nazi partisanship is very strong.

"We want to see how many of those people attend the America First meetings, as compared with honest isolationists who may have joined the organization out of sincere conviction. It will be interesting to learn whether these pro-Nazis hold any America First offices and how important they are.

Question of Influence

"Suppose it turns out that of the one million membership claimed by America First, only 25 per cent are Nazi sympathizers and the other 75 per cent are good Americans. How far do the minority influence the majority?

"It has happened before. The Nazis have used this technique of 'front' organizations in every country they have conquered. They use it right along with their technique of disunity, turning group against group and section against section."

The America First inquiry was decided upon several weeks ago and subpenas were being drafted. However, Senator Bennett Clark, anti-interventionist leader, and Gen.

Fog Covers City Second Night; Showers Today

For the second consecutive night a soupy fog, originating in Chesapeake Bay and Atlantic Ocean, last night covered the Eastern seaboard northward from the Virginia coast.

Airliners were grounded at the Washington Airport, and operations for today were doubtful.

Rain joined the fog here last night and cloudy mild weather with occasional showers was the prospect for today.

The fog was particularly severe in New York Harbor, where it was declared to be the worst mist in five years. Shipping accidents and delays were reported both in New York Harbor and in Chesapeake Bay. Snow flurries were seen in Bluefield, Va.

Arlington Span Condemned

Speed Limit on Shaky Wooden Bridge Jams D. C. Traffic

Condemnation of a small wooden bridge in Arlington County piled up a mile-long traffic jam in Washington late yesterday as the speed limit over the structure was reduced to 8 miles an hour

The traffic pile-up was created at both the north and south approaches to the bridge spanning Little River, otherwise known as Boundary Channel and connecting Lee Boulevard with Columbia Island. On the north side long lines of cars extended as far as Twenty-second street on Constitution Avenue.

The speed restriction was ordered yesterday by the National Capital Parks office, fearful that the bridge might collapse. Francis F. Gillen, assistant superintendent of parks, said signs have been posted at both ends of the bridge warning motorists, and park policemen have been assigned there to see that the speed limit is enforced.

Gillen said the timber structure, built in 1935, will be replaced. He added, however, that it will require a year or 18 months for completion. Meanwhile, traffic will flow on the timber trestle at 8 miles an hour.

Last October, Mrs. Joalita Phipps, 28, of New York City, living at the Shoreham Hotel here, was killed when the car in which she was riding, plunged into a deep gully a short distance from the south end of the bridge.

Up to Italians, Slavs

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Dec. 4.—Powerful and relentless Russian tank, cavalry and infantry charges on the Rostov and Donets Basin fronts were reported tonight in German news dispatches which said the Nazis had called upon their Italian and Slovak allies in an effort to halt the Red army.

Swarms of Russian airplanes also fell on the Axis armies, one dispatch revealed in saying 100 Red planes had been shot down.

German planes also were reported roaring to the aid of their ground forces. In one unidentified sector German divebombers destroyed 16 Soviet tanks and a Red regiment, a dispatch said.

"Mere territory is of no importance to us," a military spokesman commented on the Russian drives.

Fanatic Effort Seen

"The fighting is a fanatic Russian effort to recover lost ground. No sacrifice in men and materials seems too great for them.

"Our object is to destroy the enemy and our advantage is that we can conduct an elastic defense and choose the battlefields giving us strategic superiority."

The spokesman ridiculed Soviet reports that the Reds had reached Taganrog, 40 miles west of Rostov, which the Germans abandoned after hailing its capture as "the spigot to the Russian oil barrel."

"The Reds are nowhere near Taganrog," he declared, but he would not give the precise location of the advancing Red units.

Defensive Is Admitted

No details of the fight which pushed the Germans out of the Caucasian oil gateway were furnished by Adolf Hitler's headquarters. Nor was any mention made of the Moscow front where the Germans had claimed they were within sight of the Kremlin's towers.

But news dispatches acknowledged the Axis armies were on the

Refused to Lend Fleet

Petain Asked Goering for Arms To Defend Empire, Vichy Says

By the United Press

Vichy, Dec. 4.—France made her first official attempt to throw off the military restrictions imposed by the Compiegne armistice during the conference of Marshal Philippe Petain with German Air Marshal Hermann Goering at St. Florentin Monday, it was learned tonight.

"We want to defend our empire but give us the means to defend it," Petain told Goering. "Allow us to rearm."

Goering was pressing Petain for assurances of the absolute security of French Africa against what he called "the Anglo-American menace."

The Germans so far, however, have refused to allow more than the armistice army of 100,000 troops, plus an African colonial army of 250,000. It has been specified that France shall have no more planes, no more tanks and no more artillery than the armistice convention allows.

Report Goering Asked Help

New York, Dec. 4 (U.P.).—Private advices from Europe tonight said Goering asked Petain for aid in breaking the British Mediterranean blockade and in meeting the "American menace" in Africa.

Petain refused to let the French fleet be used for anything but the protection of French shipping, it was said.

In London, Tass, official Russian news agency, quoted well-informed sources at Istanbul tonight as saying that Petain and Goering had agreed for Axis troops to use the North African port of Tunis as a base of operations against Britain.

Nazis Bombed; Prelude to New Tobruk Thrust

Only Sporadic Clashes Take Place as Rain Hampers Both Sides

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Dec. 4.—British bombers hammered Axis troop concentrations inside Libya tonight as a prelude to another British tank drive toward Tobruk in an effort to split the German and Italian forces, front reports said.

Only sporadic ground fighting in which the British smashed three Italian tanks and attacked other small Axis units southeast of Tobruk were reported by the British command which told of another 24-hour lull in operations.

Rain hampered operations and both sides were assembling their waning tank strength for an imminent clash.

The main battle zone was south of Tobruk in the Rezegh area held by the Nazis. The British spearhead stretched southward from Rezegh to Bir El Gobi with mobile columns keeping the British supply line open to Sidi Omar near the frontier.

The Axis pocket fortifications of Salum-Halfaya near the Mediterranean coast still were intact, but British artillery and planes continued to blast at them to avert any danger to the British supply line to the south which is feeding

Military's Duty

Administration officials yesterday refused to confirm or deny the authenticity of a Chicago Tribune article asserting that a confidential report by the Army-Navy Joint Board calls for a 5,000,000-man A. E. F. to go into action against Germany by July 1, 1943.

Secretary of the Navy Knox, who left President Roosevelt's office with a copy of the article under his arm, told White House reporters an investigation was under way in "all departments" to determine the source of the report.

Presidential Secretary Stephen Early had made the same announcement earlier in the day, and the War Department said it had "nothing to add" to Early's statement.

Many Accept Authenticity

Although some Administration spokesmen on Capitol Hill bitterly denounced the Tribune article, many officials did not question the authenticity of the documents on which the report was based and confined their criticism to what they called the Tribune's "interpretations."

Early pointed out at his press conference that it was the duty of the war plans branches of the War and Navy Departments, "even in peace times, to study and devise plans for all possible emergencies."

"Even the most improbable situations are studied and planned," he added.

"If they lacked the plans to meet this emergency or any phase of it," Early declared, "they would be guilty of inefficiency, and if the President of the United States per-

Tokyo's Official News Agency Says Our Policy Bars Accord

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Friday), Dec. 5.—The authoritative Japanese news agency Domei said today that "Japan cannot accept" the stipulations of the document which the United States Government handed to the Japanese Ambassador November 26 in the course of negotiations aimed at maintenance of peace in the Pacific.

Quoting observers described as thoroughly reliable, although unofficial, Domei said:

"Such a document cannot serve as a basic datum in Japanese-American negotiations henceforth.

"Japanese-American conversations have taken place twice since the United States handed over to Japan the document in question, and the United States Government has sent the Japanese inquiries pertaining to certain questions.

No Evidence of Progress

"But there is no tangible evidence of progress of the negotiations."

Because of Domei's close connections with the government, Americans considered the Domei statement to be an accurate forecast of the eventual Japanese reply to the American questions.

Domei further quoted observers as charging that "unilateral disclosure by Secretary Hull of details of the negotiations has made the situation still graver."

"Hull's exposure," the statement said, "creates doubt whether the United States is earnestly willing to reach an agreement through the current negotiations, especially in view of the fact it was made when the situation was most delicate, with no satisfactory conclusion having been arrived at, despite the presence in Washington of Saburo Kurusu (Japan's special envoy) for 17 long days."

"The statement, . . . together with recent strengthening of military arrangements of the anti-Japanese encirclement camp, has come to assume an appearance demanding the utmost caution.

Held for Home Consumption

"While it is difficult to surmise the reason Hull made the statement, it is considered one of various preparatory measures the American Government apparently is making, assuming every possible sort of development in the negotiations.

"It appears clear that the statement was a domestic gesture, airing for the American public a statement which the Government is attempting to use to drive into the anti-Japanese camp those not already keeping step with the Government

Roosevelt May Get Explanation Of Nipponese Troop Moves

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of State Hull is expected to receive Japan's explanation of its military concentrations in Indo-China from Ambassador Nomura and Saburo Kurusu, special Japanese "peace envoy" to Washington, in a momentous interview at 11 a. m. today.

The State Department announced the appointment, made at the Japanese diplomats' request, shortly after a Japanese Embassy spokesman said the envoys would present their government's reply today to President Roosevelt's request for an accounting for the heavy troop movements into strategic Indo-China, which borders Thailand and British Burma.

The embassy stated that Nomura and Kurusu also may present to Hull a general statement of Japanese policy in reply to the note given them last week at the State Department, outlining America's position in the Pacific crisis.

Officials here held out little hope that the Japanese reply would ease Far Eastern tension in view of a dispatch yesterday in which the official Japanese news agency Domei asserted that "it is utterly impossible for Japan to accept" America's terms for peace in the Orient.

At the same time, in many quarters here, the belief was expressed that the Pacific crisis might continue for days without a clear "break" in the direction of peace or war.

Showdown Not Imminent

Congressional leaders who surveyed the Far Eastern crisis in a two-hour conference with President Roosevelt yesterday were reported to have left the White House with an impression that the situation is critical, but will not necessarily come to a showdown with the presentation of Japan's reply today.

Japan's explanation of its military activity in Indo-China, it was pointed out, will certainly not contain an admission that troops are being sent into the French colony for aggressive purposes and is likely to be couched in terms that will require a carefully drafted American reply.

Tokyo is expected to refer to British defense measures in Malaya and Singapore as requiring "counter measures" on Japan's part. An attempt by Hull to explore this charge in conversations with Kurusu and Nomura might lead into general discussion of one of Japan's major theses in the current negotiations—that she is being "encircled" by the ABCD powers (America, Britain, China and the Dutch East Indies.)

This argument, in turn, would bring up Japan's Axis ties and her 10-year record of military expan-

Mexico City, Dec. 4 (AP).—The Japanese minister, several officials of the legation and numerous members of the Japanese colony speeded up preparations for return to Japan today.

In diplomatic circles it was reported their decision was prompted by arrival of a courier bringing from Washington confidential reports of the progress of United States-Japanese negotiations.

The Japanese residents of the capital were said to fear that Mexico would be drawn into any United States-Japanese conflict.

'The Canners vs. Defense'

Batt Denounces 'Politics' Blocking Douglas Dam Funds

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

William L. Batt, OPM materials director, yesterday declared that the "politics" which killed an appropriation for the construction of the Douglas Dam in East Tennessee threatened "an irreparable blow to the national defense program."

Without mincing words, the Philadelphia manufacturer, who is in charge of the defense effort's raw materials program, declared that the opposition to the proposed dam by Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, "has no technical foundation."

Batt admitted that he had "heard" that McKellar was responsible for the House Appropriations Committee blocking the funds in a vote on a defense bill on Wednesday.

Asked at a press conference what McKellar's motives might have been in opposing the dam, which would make 100,000 kilowatts of power available in early 1943, Batt replied:

"You'll have to use your imagination."

Later, however, he added:

"It seems to me this is a case of the canners, plus whatever help they can get from high places, against defense."

In his arguments against the Douglas Dam, McKellar had stated that several thousand acres supplying vegetables to Tennessee canning factories would be flooded by the proposed dam.

Batt prefaced his detailed discussion of the problem with the statement that the OPM had frequently been criticized on Capitol Hill for being "too little and too late," but that in this case he wished to make a record showing where the blame must be placed if there is a drastic power shortage in 1943.

Axis Oil Reserve Will Be Gone In 3 Months, Red Expert Says

Kuibyshev, Russia, Dec. 4.—Reserve petroleum supplies of the German and Italian armies will be exhausted within 2½ to 3 months, and after that period Hitler will have to run on the limited production available to him in the Reich and occupied areas and in all likelihood will be forced to curtail vastly both mechanized and air activities.

Already, on some sectors of the Russian front, Nazi attacks have been limited by lack of fuel and German motorized equipment is deteriorating at an abnormal rate because of the poor quality of gasoline mixtures.

These statements were made to this correspondent today in an interview with Maj. Gen. Pitor Kotoff, of the Soviet Tank Army, who is one of the chief petroleum experts of the Red army.

Kotoff pointed out that Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's counteroffensive in the south has tightly slammed the door to the Caucasus and the valuable Russian oil fields.

He predicted the Nazis would be forced again to try to seize those areas, but said their time schedule was now completely ruined and they

U. S. Tanker's Shells Hit Sub, Navy Says

Torpedoed Salinas' Crew Struck Back, Report Discloses

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

The Navy reported yesterday that the torpedoed naval tanker Salinas apparently damaged a U-boat when attacked by a submarine wolf-pack off Iceland October 30.

Details of the incident just made public disclose that the vessel was torpedoed during a dawn battle between several U-boats and a convoy of ships protected by escort craft. From the report it appeared that the 5-inch guns of the tanker made the American Navy's first official score in the Battle of the Atlantic.

The department published extracts from the official report of the commander of the Salinas, disclosing that the ship was first attacked "in the predawn hour . . . without warning." Though badly damaged by the torpedoes the Salinas was kept afloat and is now safe in an American port.

Five torpedoes were launched at the tanker, Comdr. Harley F. Cope, its captain, reported. The first two were fired at 7:12 a. m., ship's time, and at least one hit the vessel. While the crew maintained battle-stations, Capt. Cope said, steps were taken to insure the safety of all aboard and ascertain the extent of damage.

Twenty-two minutes later a submarine was sighted to the starboard of the ship, Cope said. It fired three torpedoes from a surface position.

"The Salinas fired on the submarine," the Navy said. "There was some evidence that the counterattack did damage to the submarine, though the extent is not known."

About 3½ hours later, it was stated, another submarine periscope was sighted.

"The escort vessels detached from the convoy to aid the tanker made an attack with depth charges, results unknown," the Navy added.

Naval officials were high in their praise of the officers and crew of the Salinas, and it was announced that Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, had officially commended Commander Cope "for the excellent degree of judgment, effort and seamanship displayed on this occasion."

Stark also commended the officers and men of the ship for conducting themselves "in a manner reflecting the greatest credit on the Naval Service."

The Navy's statement did not disclose how many times the Salinas was hit, but Cope's report indicated that more than one torpedo struck the vessel.

"The conduct of the personnel during the entire period was exemplary," he stated.

Twenty Get Special Mention

Cope singled out five officers and 15 enlisted mentor special mention. Lieut. Comdr. Ashton B. Smith, Lieut. L. J. Modave, Ensign S. J. Abrams, Quartermaster (third class) Thomas G. Kneavel, Seaman (first class) Lunsford O. Garrett, jr., Seamen (second class) Garland J. Vaughn and Edwin Davis, Chief Quartermaster Henry J. Holzhauer, Quartermaster (first class) Edward M. Eakin and Signalman (first class) Edward J. Murphy were praised for their "courage and coolness."

The ship's engineer officer (Lieut. (junior grade) Theodore L. Jermann, Chief Machinist's Mate Francis H. McIntyre and Machinist's Mate (first class) Rual S. Wilson were commended for their courage and their work in keeping the ship afloat and getting it to port.

Others specially commended in the report were Lieut. Henry K. Wallace, Chief Electrician's Mate Albert W. Brown, Machinist's Mate (first class) Lloyd A. Savage, Machinist's Mate (second class) William L. Sachs, Fireman (first class) Roy Wood and Fireman (first class) William L. Archer.

Troubleshooters

U. S. Experts On Way to Burma Road

By the Associated Press

Manila, Philippine Islands, Dec. 4. A detachment of 46 United States mechanical and trucking experts, assigned to smash the bottlenecks in the Burma military supply road to China, and who will be protected from Japanese bombers in that vital task by American planes and pilots, have arrived here en route to their new posts.

With this initial group, in a single shipment, came $250,000 worth of supplies for the Burma Road transportation organization along with war materials for American forces in the Far East.

The Americans are under contract to Chiang Kai-shek, the Chinese generalissimo, at pay running up to $500 a month.

Their job will be to handle the temperamental truckers, whose quiet fatalism keeps Burma Road traffic in an uproar. They will establish repair stations all along the 712-mile roadway, which runs from British Burma into nationalist China, and will set up a wireless system to summon repair trucks for quick action whenever—as often occurs—a crippled machine stalls a convoy in the mountainous passes.

Road Being Widened

The road already is being repaired, surfaced and widened with American machinery and the labor of the Chinese hill tribesmen and women who three and a half years ago scratched it out of the higherto impassable mountains with their bare hands and primitive instruments.

The immediate objective set by the Americans and by the Chinese government transportation officials is 30,000 tons of traffic monthly. That would compare with 3000 tons a month for last year.

(In Washington it was disclosed on Wednesday night that United States lease-lend aid to China had reached enormous volume. Government officials reported that about 14,000 American-made trucks soon would be rolling over the Burma Road.)

About 260 American pilots who have quit the Army and Navy, for the time being, are flying in patrols against Japanese bombing raids. A larger number of mechanics and technicians are in the service.

Coincidentally with this earnest of Amercia's intention not only to go on aiding China, but greatly to step up that aid, dispatches from Singapore reported during the day an impression there among qualified observers that Japanese military preparations in southeast Asia had been turned from the offensive to defensive character.

The arrival in Singapore of the 35,000-ton British battleship Prince of Wales, along with other powerful advance elements of the new Royal Eastern Fleet, was assumed to have made the Japanese understand that Britain means business.

The turn in Japanese preparation was illustrated by the report that antiaircraft defenses were being developed in Japanese-occupied French Indo-China and that fighter planes had been sent to the Pacific mandated islands where their activity could be only that of defense.

sion as the cause of the precautions being taken by the ABCD powers.

May Drag Out Talks

Discussion of Japanese troop movements in Indo-China thus would be difficult to separate from the other issues outstanding between Japan and the United States, it was pointed out, and might continue for some time, unless terminated by a Japanese attack on Thailand or Burma.

The possibility of such a conclusion to the Hull-Kurusu conversations was still causing anxiety among officials here yesterday.

Secretary of the Navy Knox, who has called at the White House half a dozen times in the past ten days, conferred with President Roosevelt for 45 minutes yesterday.

He was followed into the executive office by Secretary Hull, who remained nearly an hour.

Welles, Casey Confer

Meanwhile at the State Department Undersecretary Welles was meeting with Australian Minister Richard G. Casey, whose country would play a large part in any joint Pacific strategy evolved by the ABCD powers.

The Congressional leaders who conferred with the President yesterday were Vice President Wallace, Speaker Rayburn, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, ranking majority member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, acting majority leader; House Majority Leader McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Through George and McCormack, as they left the White House, the group issued a statement whose wording had apparently been approved by the President.

"The Far Eastern situation was thoroughly canvassed in connection with the defense of our own territories and vital interests in the Far East," they reported.

Illustrating the uncertainty in Washington diplomatic quarters over the outcome of the Pacific crisis were the conflicting interpretations given yesterday to two reports of hasty movements toward Tokyo by Japanese diplomats.

A Mexico City dispatch telling of the Japanese diplomatic staff's hasty preparations for a return to Japan was cited as evidence of fear that war was near and Mexico might be aligned with the United States in the conflict.

in persisting in its policy against Japan."

Domei quoted the observers as saying that the Hull statement, which was not printed in Tokyo, indicated that "optimism is not permitted."

The United States was described as "still scheming to impose on Japan the provisions of old, obsolete principles which are incompatible with even the actual Far Eastern conditions of bygone days."

Afternoon newspapers in Japan did not print the text of the Hull statement, but they gave front page prominence to the general aspects of the Washington negotiations, with sharply critical comment.

("If the United States and Britain try to keep Thailand out of the east Asia prosperity sphere, that fact alone will be a most serious threat to peace as far as Japan is concerned.

("Japan cannot tolerate any intrusion by the Anglo-Saxon powers into her natural economic and political expansion toward southern Asia.")

The Domei reference was to the document which Secretary Hull, on November 26, handed to the two Japanese envoys who are conducting apparently definitive negotiations in Washington.

Barred Aggression

(This set forth the basic principles which the United States feels must be observed by all nations, including Japan, if peace is to be achieved and maintained in the Pacific. These fundamental policies, enumerated by Hull in 1937, would, in their practical application, require Japan to end her armed expansion in the Far East, withdraw military forces from China and French-Indo China and adopt peaceful economic policies to supplant the militarily established "East Asia co-prosperity sphere.")

United States-Japanese negotiations at Washington were studied today in a two and one-half hour session of the Japanese privy council, highest advisory organ of the empire, with Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo and Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo reporting in detail.

"Active opinions were exchanged by the privy councilors and the premier and foreign minister," said Domei, Japanese news agency. The council is consulted by Emperor Hirohito in all major crises in Japanese foreign relations.

Pessimistic views of the international situation were expressed by government leaders and generally by the Japanese press.

The President's Day

By International News Service

FAR EAST NEARER: After the regulation coffee klatch with his aides, the President went to the oval room study to brush off a bit of work, get set for the conference with the Congressional big four, now expanded to six. For an hour and a half, the President gave the feed-box dope, answered questions on all phases of the Far Eastern situation as it pertains to U. S. defense.

RETURN OF THE RESIGNED: C. I. O. President Phil Murray, whose resignation from the Labor Mediation Board was turned down by Mr. Roosevelt, came at Presidential request, stomped out 20 minutes later "the most noncommital man ever to exit from 'his' office."

OLIVE BRANCHER: Harry Bates head of the A. F. L. bricklayers' union and one-time chairman of the A. F. L. peace committee for reconciliation with C. I. O., dropped by with an olive branch idea which interests the President. Bates said yes, it would be a very nice thing to have peace between the unions.

BIANNUAL AVUNCULAR: "Uncle Fred" Delano and his National Resources Planning Board chose the few unscheduled minutes before lunchtime for a biannual call on Nephew Franklin, lingered over conversational this and that until Laurence Steinhardt, returned Ambassador to Russia was announced for a deskside lunch. On his second trip to the President's office, Steinhardt had a longer time, got further with his report on Russia and the Russian situation as he sees it.

EXPLOSIVE INVESTIGATION: Head lowered for a charge through the reporter-filled lobby, Col. Knox, publisher and Secretary of Navy, made for Mr. Roosevelt's office. An hour later he exited, head still lowered, said that among other things he now knew—there would definitely be an investigation of the Chicago Tribune article on United States military plans.

TALK "EVERYTHING:" Unheralded and unscheduled, Secretary of State Hull came over to talk "everything" over with the Chief.

COOL-OFF: To cool off, to get an hour for uninterrupted thought, Mr. Roosevelt bundled into a light coat, plopped the old grey hat on his head and snuck out the side door shortly after 4. Until dark the President drove around Potomac Park, the quiet outer reaches of the Capital, returned in time for dinner, relaxed and ready for a slew of night work. With him went tail-wagging, delighted "Fala," who looked out one window while the President looked out another.

50,000 Planes A Year Held Likely in 1942

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 4.—The American aircraft industry has "every reason to believe" that an annual production of 50,000 airplanes—the number suggested by President Roosevelt before a joint session of Congress last year—will be reached in 1942.

This forecast was made today by John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

If that rate is attained next year, the industry will be from two and one-half to three years ahead of the schedule estimated in the summer of 1940 by T. P. Wright, now assistant chief of the aircraft branch of the Office for Emergency Management.

"It is estimated," Wright forecast in July, last year, "that an airplane production rate of approximately . . . 4000 planes a month, or 50,000 planes a year, can be realized in five years, or by July, 1945."

Output Now Above Reich's

In a report to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Charles H. Dolan, World War flying ace and president of the Lafayette Escadrille, said that the Nation's aircraft industry had already surpassed Germany's and predicted that within one year it would surpass the combined production of the rest of the world.

"No industry in this country has ever experienced such tremendous growth in an incredibly short time," he told the aviation division of the society. "American ingenuity has transformed a sick cat into a three billion dollar industry in a year and a half."

Jouett, in reporting to members of the trade association at their annual meeting today, declared:

"You will recall that when President Roosevelt in his defense message of May 16, 1940, said that he would like to see the industry able to turn out 50,000 planes a year, it seemed a fantastic figure in view of the past, both here and abroad.

"We now have every reason to believe that an annual production rate of 50,000 planes will be reached some time next year."

'Deciding Factor'

The industry in 1941 will produce nearly 20,000 planes, Jouett added, and will be called upon to put out nearly 100,000 warplanes during the next two years. These planes, he asserted, "will prove to be, beyond any question, the deciding factor in this war."

Jouett was reelected to a fourth term as president of the chamber.

Other officers elected were: Vice presidents, P. G. Johnson, Boeing Aircraft Co., Seattle, Wash.; J. Carlton Ward, jr., Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation, New York; C. S. Jones, Casey Jones School of Aeronautics, Newark, N. J.; Harrison Brand, jr., Washington, D. C. and Howard Mingos, Washington, D. C.; secretary, Irving H. Taylor, Washington, D. C.; treasurer, Harrison Brand, jr., assistant treasurer, Vincent Ford, Los Angeles, Calif.; assistant secretary, Stewart J. Moulin, Los Angeles.

Hitler Defeat Will Cost U. S. 120 Billions

By James B. Reston

Copyright by New York Times

The United States must spend between 120 and 150 billion dollars to bring about the defeat of Germany, defense officials estimated in a report scheduled to be sent to President Roosevelt within the next few days.

This so-called "victory program" outlines the revolutionary changes that must be wrought in the Nation's economy in the next two years and declares that defense expenditures in 1942 must total 40 billion dollars and between 50 and 60 billion dollars in 1943, if this country is to provide the equipment necessary for total victory.

President Roosevelt, who asked defense officials last June to provide this report, is expected to outline the "victory program" within the next month in a message to Congress and a fireside chat to the Nation.

It is stated authoritatively that this program was conceived and defined by the President himself early last summer before his visit with Prime Minister Winston Churchill on the Atlantic, where the program was discussed at considerable length.

Apparently Roosevelt's Idea

Until that time each of the Allied nations had been defining its defense costs in terms of the amount of money necessary to equip its own army.

President Roosevelt apparently emphasized during the Atlantic meeting, however, that by far the most effective and eventually the most economical way to win the war was to standardize and pool the equipment of Russia, Britain and the United States and to gear the industrial machines of the three countries to produce whatever was necessary to defeat Hitler.

It is furthermore known that in the Atlantic conversations it was agreed that the "victory program" should assume that in order to bring about the total defeat of the Nazis it would be necessary to equip an expeditionary force to fight on the continent of Europe. A careful check clearly indicates that Mr. Roosevelt did not make any commitments to send a United States expeditionary force; he merely accepted the idea that in all preparations for the defeat of the Nazis it would be necessary to produce the equipment for a land offensive against Germany.

Nazi Gains Force Revision

As a result of these conversations, the United States made a complete survey of British, and so far as they were permitted, of Russian industrial potential, and ever since the return of our mission from Moscow, defense experts have been working on this report, which estimates our part in producing the equipment for the British and the Russians.

The recent success of the Germans in the Russian industrial regions has forced a reconsideration of the first draft of the program, which has been in the President's hands for some days, and there is evidence that the program as it now stands calls for about 20 billion dollars more than it did several weeks ago.

There are no illusions among officials of the Government about what an expenditure of some 125 billion dollars means. It is accepted that it means the most complete reorganization of our industrial machine; curtailment of goods for civilian consumption beyond anything attempted since the industrial revolution in this country; a lowering of the standard of living of the people; taxation far beyond the present burden, and a regimentation of business unequalled in our history.

Nazi Crew May Face Pirates' Fate

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 4 (U.P.).—The 320 survivors of the German sea raider Steiermark may be treated as pirates if it can be established that their ship did not run up the German flag before firing on the lost Australian cruiser Sydney, it was announced officially today.

Some survivors have admitted that the raider, which had the false name "Kormoran" painted on its side, was flying a Norwegian flag when it sighted the Sydney, it was announced.

Spanish Goodwill Fliers Murdered, Indians Say

Mexcio City, Dec. 4 (INS).—After seven years of mystery, it was believed tonight that the fate of the Spanish goodwill fliers, Barberan and Collar, had been solved when Indians from the hills beyond Vera Cruz declared they had been murdered after their plane crashed.

Five Indians were brought to Puebla late today by police. One of them, Luis Rico, told the public prosecutor the Spanish aviators had been robbed and slain following their crash in the vicinity of Papgayo, Vera Cruz, after safely spanning the Atlantic.

Nice Hand: Soldier Holds 6 'Coffee Queens' for Cameramen

Because it was a little foggy yesterday fate threw a wild pair of dice and quite unexpectedly First Class Private Earl Perkins cashed in, to wit:

He hugged, enmasse, six senoritas, the loveliest girls in Latin America, or the best that Cuba, Columbia, Brazil, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Mexico and Venezuela offer—which is all right for a fellow who's just waiting for a train.

The girls were scheduled to arrive at the National Airport at 12:30 p. m., and there to meet them were representatives of their embassies and legations here. At 1:10 p. m. the solemn committees departed for Union Station, the foggy weather having sent the girls by train.

So when the six alighted, the committee punctiliously bowed, in old Spanish custom. Bundled in his overcoat First Class Private Perkins regarded the girls politely, a universal custom. The photographers saw him and wanted him, as typical of Mr. America now, close among the lovely Latins.

O. K., Perkins! There's nothing bad about fogs or that Good Neighbor policy.

Rains Come to Morven, Leave 29th Wet on Eve of Departure

By Marshall Andrews

Post Staff Writer

Morven, N. C., Dec. 4.—After two months of ideal weather, the rains came today and left the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division and its equipment drenched on the eve of departure for home.

Worst feature of the rain, which poured sullenly on the division's scattered camp all day, was that practically all its tentage was still standing. Only the weatherwise 116th Infantry from the valley of Virginia, struck its tents yesterday and had them packed, dry and safe in freight cars today.

The division command is faced now with the dilemma of packing its tents wet in the hope of drying them at Fort George G. Meade, Md., or leaving detachments behind to strike and pack the tents after the division leaves Sunday at 1 a. m. The rain also may force the Fifty-eighth Brigade to make a detour through Wadesboro, N. C., to avoid a 13-mile stretch of dirt road, now dissolved into a morass.

Celebrations Scheduled

Today and tomorrow have been set aside for farewells to the Carolinas and their people. Parties and celebrations were scheduled throughout the division from the commanding general to the newest private.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord and his staff today entertatined at cocktails and lunch the Mayor of Cheraw, S. C., J. H. Ramseur, and a party of prominent citizens. Among these were J. H. Wannamaker, W. H. Wannamaker, J. K. McCown, J. S. Funderburk, J. D. Nock, B. A. Moore and Harvey Burnette.

This afternoon, Gen. Reckord and his staff entertained a party from Concord, N. C., at cocktails and dinner. In brief talks after luncheon, Mayor Ramseur and members of his party expressed regret that the division was leaving and they had welcomed it "partly because it was the hospitable thing to do and partly because you are standing between us and danger."

Tonight the 115th Infantry (Maryland) Glee Club entertained the citizens of Cheraw in the high school auditorium. The 104th Medical Regiment (Maryland and Virginia) tonight turned out in the rain to burn in effigy "old man maneuver" and the 175th Infantry (Baltimore) tomorrow will barbecue an animal variously described as a bull and a cow by its town-bred members.

Advance Party Leaves

Maj. Cooper B. Rhodes, of Washington, assistant division personnel officer, left today at the head of an advance party selecting bivouac sites along the route home.

Numerous promotions within the division, made possible by transfers of overage officers to administrative duties elsewhere, will be made soon after the division arrives at Meade. The division also will lose many of its experienced officers, including Gen. Reckord and Col. John W. Oehmann, District Building Inspector, who commands the 121st Engineers, because of age in grade regulations.

U. S. Officials Neither Deny Nor Confirm Story of Plans for an A.E.F.

mitted them to face an emergency without a plan, he too would be guilty of negligence."

This view was echoed by several defense officials, who pointed out that it was the duty of Army and Navy strategists to prepare, at least on paper, plans covering all conceivable contingencies and that blueprints for dozens of "hypothetical wars" must be on file somewhere in Washington.

The copyrighted Tribune story asserted that President Roosevelt, in a letter dated July 9, asked Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox and Harry Hopkins, White House confidant, to prepare a report on the amount of "munitions and mechanical equipment of all types" which would be required to surpass the armament "available to our potential enemies."

"I realize," wrote the President, as quoted by the Tribune, "that this report involves the making of appropriate assumptions as to our probable friends and enemies and the conceivable theaters of operation which will be required."

The report sent to the President, the article continues, was prepared by the Army and Navy Joint Board and dated September 11.

In the report the defense strategists assert that "Germany and her European satellites cannot be defeated by the European powers now fighting against her," according to the Tribune, and they conclude:

"If our European enemies are to be defeated it will be necessary for the United States to enter the war, and to employ a part of its armed forces offensively in the eastern Atlantic and in Europe and Africa."

The Tribune article says the report fixes July 1, 1943, as the date for the beginning of an A. E. F. drive against the Reichswehr and that the "war prospectus" calls for an ultimate Army land force of 6,745,658 men, 2,050,000 in the Army Air Force and 1,100,000 in the Navy.

The estimate that the European expeditionary force will number five million men "is contained in the section of the report that deals with shipping," the Tribune continued.

"It states that there will not be enough shipping to transport such a force to Europe over a period of one year," the article said, "but that the building up of large military forces in the theater of operations will probably extend over a period of at least two years.'"

Government officials who read the Tribune story pointed out that it did not quote directly any passage in the shipping section or any other section of the report stating that the Joint Board believed it would be necessary to dispatch an A. E. F. of that size.

Throughout the Tribune article, however, the Army and Navy strategists are quoted as preparing for "active participation" of the United States in the war and they describe America's primary objective as "the complete military defeat of Germany."

Readers of the article noted that the report assumed that Russia would be "militarily impotent" after next July and suggested that news from the Russian front in the past three months since the report was prepared may have forced a revision of that estimate and thus scaled down the size of the American forces which might be required to turn the balance against Hitler.

Early began his press conference comment on the Tribune article by saying he had not talked to the President about the story and was "in no position to confirm or deny it."

The White House secretary pointed out that the President's letter to Stimson, as quoted by the Tribune made no reference to an A. E. F. He added:

"Had any other element of the press obtained the story it probably would have been more factually presented and not so many interpretations given."

Officials here took particular exception to a statement in the third sentence of the Tribune article asserting that the Army-Navy report "represents decisions and commitments affecting the destinies of peoples throughout the civilized world."

If authentic, the report represents the defense chiefs' answer to the President's request for an estimate of "the over-all production requirements required to defeat our potential enemies," they said, and as such does not involve any "decision" or "commitment."

At the Capitol yesterday Representative Michener (Republican), of Michigan, demanded that action on the supplemental defense supply bill should be suspended until Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, was called for questioning on the story.

Chairman Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, in charge of the bill, replied that the Appropriations Committee had not been given "the slightest intimation" that defense officials were preparing to use American troops outside the Western Hemisphere.

"We're not sending men to do this job," he said. "We're sending materials."

Cannon added that the A. E. F. story was published by a newspaper "notoriously opposed to the Government's foreign policy."

He said the article was "garbled and wholly erroneous," charged the Tribune reporter with a "deliberate misquotation" and said the report on which the article was based was "entirely obsolete" because of Russia's stand against the Nazis.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, said he had consulted War Department officials about the article and that they asserted it was not the opinion of the department that Germany could not be defeated by the forces now opposing her, as reported by the Tribune.

New Cooperation Of British Guiana, U. S. Is Seen

Georgetown, British Guiana, Dec. 4 (AP).—An important move for further cooperation between the United States and England in British Guiana, where the United States already has defense bases, was reported in a preliminary announcement to the legislature today by Gov. Sir Gordon Lethem.

He told the legislators the most cordial relations existed between the United States military and civil representatives here and the government and people of British Guiana, and added that the latter are being taken a step further.

"I have the strongest reason to believe that these projects, which are held so much at heart by the heads of our states, are going forward and that we should even hope in due course, perhaps during this present session, to see some public announcement," Sir Gordon said.

No elaboration concerning the new projects could be obtained in official circles.

Labor Maps Senate Fight On Smith Bill

"antilabor" bills before Congress "constitute a direct attack on the national defense program. Murray called the six vice presidents of the C. I. O. to an emergency meeting on Saturday and charged basic rights guaranteed by the Constitution "are being threatened."

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, meanwhile proposed a two-way approach to defense labor relations, picking up features of the LaFollette oppressive labor practices bill which passed the Senate last year, and offsetting these industrial controls with like restrictions on labor.

"Labor Can Thank Lewis"

"Labor can thank John L. Lewis for the Smith bill," Pepper said. "The House decided that the time has come to quit dallying with domestic obstructions to our foreign policy."

Pepper, a member of the Senate Labor Committee, said he will suggest that the LaFollette bill restrictions on industrial use of labor spies, strikebreakers and private armed guards acting away from company property be included in the Senate bill. He said a "code" could be formulated equally operative against excess by labor or industry "but the time has come when labor must accept responsibilities."

His plan was similar to the Hobbs amendment to the Smith bill, which forbids importation of outsiders by labor to assist in a picket line and banned use of professionals by employers to break a strike.

Regardless of what action the Labor Committee takes—and members discounted any possibility that it will approve anything so drastic as the Smith bill—indications were that all of the House bill provisions will be offered independently when the legislation reaches the Senate.

Byrd Favors Smith Bill

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, disclosed he will make a fight for the measure in the Senate and called it "far more effective" than the Connally plant-seizure bill.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, said he was still disposed toward the Ball bill, providing permanent procedure for voluntary settlement of strikes similar to that in the Railway Mediation Act.

The Smith bill was turned over to the Labor Committee as its own report favoring the Ball measure was made public.

The report, filed by Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, said the committee believes the President already has the power to take over plants proposed in the Connally bill and the ultimate remedy, if Ball bill procedures fail and a critical defense plant is closed, "is the seizure and operation of that plant by the Government."

The report apparently committed the committee in advance against early action to "regulate" labor unions.

"The committee believes the problem of handling labor disputes so as to promote peaceful settlements is the urgent and immediate problem confronting the Nation," it said. "The question of whether there should be Federal regulation of labor organizations and the character of such regulation constitute a complicated and difficult problem which should be the subject of complete hearings at which all interested groups could present their views."

Although no date was set for the Labor Committee meeting, Senator Taft obtained unanimous consent for it to meet and file a report on the House bill before the Senate convenes again Monday.

Green, in his statement, expressed doubt that the Smith bill ever would become law, but declared that if it did it would provoke and not prevent strikes. He said the A. F. of L. voluntarily had adopted a no-strike policy in the defense program and said it had been "religiously carried out by more than 99 per cent of our members."

"But under no circumstances will the A. F. L. ever submit to the restriction of the right to strike by law," he said. "We will protest against it to our dying breath."

Murray, in a letter to C. I. O. affiliates, urged them to immediately arrange mass meetings to formulate and forward protests to the President and to Senators and again proposed a national conference here of labor, industry and government.

Copper Need, Rumors Face Priority Quiz

Officially taking cognizance of "many conflicting stories and reports on copper production," the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board announced last night it had ordered full public hearings on the controversial subject of increasing production of the scarce and vital metal.

The hearings, ot be conducted by the OPM, presumably under the direction of its materials chief, William L. Batt, will be begun as soon as possible, it was said. Presiding will be an impartial chairman, whom SPAB asked OPM to select from outside its ranks.

Behind the order for the investigation, it was believed, is the knowledge that SPAB must soon decide critical and politically difficult questions on allocating copper. Before it takes steps liable to have drastic effect on the civilian economy, it was said that SPAB wishes to make a public record showing what amounts of copper are available and how intense the shortage, if any, will be.

Idle Ore Deposits

Recently, reports have been widely circulated that the Nation's copper supply, plus imports are adequate for all needs, provided only that certain idle deposits of copper ore are brought into production.

In ordering the hearing the superplanning and production policy agency declared it was moved by the consideration that copper is essential to the maintenance of civilian economy and that any shortage is immediately reflected by a rise in unemployment.

It added a word of confidence in the reports of OPM by saying that it has consistently felt that all the pertinent questions have been brought before it and that those issues which could be settled have been settled.

Many Conflicting Reports

"Nevertheless," the statement continued, "SPAB recognizes that there are current today . . . many conflicting stories and reports on copper production. It also recognizes the urgent necessity of exploring every possible avenue of approach to the situation.

"Consequently, it has requested OPM to hold a full public hearing on all proposed methods of increasing copper production and has asked that a full digest of all practicable methods of increasing production, as brought out by the hearing, be compiled and laid before SPAB."

Hotel in Lexington Sold for $80,000

Lexington, Va., Dec. 4 (AP).—A deed transferring the Mayflower Hotel, owned by W. W. Coffey, to Ralph E. Hartman and Mrs. Katherine Hartman, of Fredericksburg, Va., with possession January 1, was filed yesterday in the Rockbridge County clerk's office. The purchase price was given as $80,000.

Defense Broker's Profits Described

as $1600 in pocket money, and his "influence" with the man "who will be the next President of the United States."

Shanack flashed $1600 in currency while on a trip to Bridgeport, Conn., where Remington operates a big factory, the committee was told by Carl Gitzendanner, secretary-treasurer of the Greenwich Machine & Tool Co., a small New York concern.

Gitzendanner stated that Shanack "was always subject to call and just had to have that much money."

Burton asked him who the persons were who "might want $500 or so" and the witness replied:

"Mr. Shanack never discusses names."

It was from production by Gitzendanner's firm of small-arms dies for Government plants at Lake City, near Independence, Mo., and Denver, that Shanack realized the bulk of his profits, the Greenwich official's testimony showed.

100 Per Cent Profit on One Order

The broker made his money, or stands to make it, in the difference between the unit price for dies, as set out in Shanack's purchase orders from Remington Arms and the price Shanack paid Greenwich for manufacture of the equipment. On one order, the profit was shown to be an even 100 per cent. On another order, the price to Shanack was more than twice the price to Greenwich. Most of the subcontracts were placed by Remington Arms under a multi-million-dollar cost-plus-fixed-fee management contract it holds from the War Department for operation of its .30 and .50 caliber cartridge plants.

It was learned last night that the War Department has launched an investigation of the Shanack subcontracts. Officials are seeking to determine whether any means or basis exists under present law for recapture of profits or punitive action.

In his investigation of Shanack deals, Miller said, he came into contact with the broker on numerous occasions, but only once, and then only briefly, did he find him alone. On all other occasions, he declared, Shanack was accompanied by Jules Salky, a New York detective lieutenant.

"Salky did all he could to sell me a bill of goods labeled L. K. Shanack," Miller stated. "He told me we ought to let these little fellows alone when there were so many big shots around.

"He mentioned the name of a high personage in New York who would be the next President of the United States and told me that, after the election, if there was anything I wanted in the Government, just speak to Shanack."

Burton was about to ask Miller for the name of the "high personage" but Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the full Military Affairs Committee, shut him off.

Miller recalled that on one occasion, Shanack told Gitzendanner not to surrender his records on the kind of subpena served by the investigator. Shanack, Miller said, declared the subpena "no good" and warned him that "if you serve one on me, I will tear it up."

Other Deals Described

Miller told the committee that from October, 1940, to November 17 of this year, Shanack, in his deals with the Greenwich company, made $97,405 on orders completed or partially completed, and that in addition, his anticipated profits totaled $91,959 He gave the grand total as $189,364.

In addition, Jack Green, general manager of the Transcontinental Machine & Tool Co., New York, declared that Shanack made $23,427 on subcontracts with the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation, Long Island City airplane plant, and Breeze Corporations, Inc., producers of airplane motor parts. The total value of the subcontracts, said Green, was $103,000, on which he figured Shanack's profit at about 22 per cent.

Green identified two Transcontinental letters advising the Brewster and Breeze concerns that his company could take no more orders. Burton produced two letters from Shanack, bearing the same date as the Transcontinental letters, in which it was suggested that hereafter Brewster and Breeze place their orders directly with him.

Green denied that the signatures on the Transcontinental letters were his.

Girl Rodeo Star Freed on Charge Of Killing Rancher

Houston, Dec. 4 (AP).—Dark-eyed Lucyle Richards, glamour girl of the rodeos, won acquittal today on a charge of murdering Frank Y. Dew, a wealthy rancher. Then she laid plans to join her pilot-husband in Canada and possibly train future war fliers herself.

Stoic as her Indian forbears during four days of trial, she sat as though stunned for a moment after the verdict was read. Then her eyes filled with tears and she rushed over to shake hands with the nearest juror.

"Justice always wins out," she said in a choked voice.

The 32-year-old trick rider and aviatrix testified that Dew, with whom she had been friendly three years, was shot accidentally last April 27 as the two scuffled for possession of a pistol.

'Politics' Killed Douglas Dam, Batt Charges

tion of the Douglas Dam, he said; "would mean that a crippling power shortage will threaten us in 1943, just when our defense effort is scheduled to reach its peak in the production of aluminum, munitions and other critical materials."

Only Way Out, He Says

The Douglas Dam, he said, "is the only additional potential source of power anywhere in the country that can provide so much power in so short a time."

Without it, Batt warned, plans must be abandoned for additional aluminum production of from 60 to 100 million pounds in 1943, as well as for expanding production of ferro-alloys, chemicals and many other military necessities.

Batt pointed out that at no time had Congress ascribed improper motives to OPM for recommending the dam, nor had it challenged the two basic assumptions behind it—that additional power in the amount of almost one billion kilowatt hours a year was necessary and that the Douglas Dam could be built in time to provide it beginning early in 1943.

One by one Batt discussed the alternate plans proposed by McKellar and others as substitutes for the Douglas project. These suggestions and Batt's analysis of each, follow:

Steam plants—There is already a bottleneck in the manufacture of steam turbines and propulsion machinery necessary for such plants by reason, principally, of Navy demands. Producers are already "loaded to the neck" with work, one of the major builders having a five-year backlog of orders. Proposals to take over two used turbines of the Detroit Edison Co. are impractical in view of prior recommendations to use the two units in locations where power is needed even earlier than Douglas Dam generation.

Holston River Proposal

Dams on the Holston River.—Completion of these dams cannot be accomplished in time to provide the necessary power in 1943. Further, they will cost 16 million dollars more than the Douglas Dam, and will provide power at a cost of 3 mills per kilowatt hour, as against 1 to 1¼ mills from Douglas. They will necessitate the removal of 1100 farm families, as against only 700 in land to be flooded by the Douglas Dam. Batt admitted, however, that the Holston dams would flood only 5200 acres, whereas Douglas would flood 12,000.

Dams on the Cumberland River.—Batt declared McKellar had written him that the War Department was prepared to build these dams in 12 to 15 months, thus completing them between February and May, 1943. Batt read reporters a letter from Undersecretary of War Patterson, however, stating that the power from the first dam, assuming immediate beginning of construction, would not be available until September 1, 1944, and that power from the second would not come in until March 1, 1945.

Asked to comment on McKellar's insistence that TVA engineering estimates on the Holston Dams were in error, Batt revealed that he had asked advice of Gano Dunn, prominent defense engineer, and on his recommendation had enlisted the services of William P. Creager, one of the Nation's foremost hydraulic engineers. Greager's report, Batt said, substantiated the TVA estimates that the Holston Dams could not be completed for 1¼ to 1½ years later than the Douglas Dam.

Dies Scans Rolls Of America First

Robert Wood, head of the America First group, informed the Dies committee that no summons was necessary, that they would willingly supply anything that was required.

Two investigators, Michael Dwyer and Harry Pfaltsgraf, immediately moved into the America First office in Chicago and began going through the files. They have sent several shipments of material here and others are expected in the next few days.

Dies spoke in the House yesterday on "The Coming of Fascism in America," pointing out that there is a danger that groups under Nazi domination will be the nucleus of a powerful, undisguised Fascist party in this country, no matter who wins the war.

Meanwhile, the special grand jury on German agents is scheduled to resume its sessions today. Representative Hamilton Fish, whose appearance has been sought for a month, has an appointment to appear at 10:30 o'clock this morning for questioning by Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., of the Department of Justice propaganda squad. Special Assistant Attorney General George A. McNulty, chief of the criminal division trial section, also is expected to take part in the grand-jury session.

Among subjects about which questioning of Fish was indicated were the operations of his secretary, George Hill, 45, alleged Nazi propaganda key men, who is awaiting trial January 7 on two charges of perjury filed by the special grand jurors after they heard Hill testify.

Bridge Span Plunges 80 Feet Into River, Killing 8 Workers

By the Associated Press

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 4 (AP).—At least eight workmen were hurled to death today when half of the water span of the new $1,900,000 Connecticut River Bridge plunged with a grinding roar 80 feet into the river.

Seven bodies were recovered soon after the collapse, and tonight divers from the New London submarine base brought an eighth from under 350 tons of submerged wreckage where six other missing men were feared buried. Seventeen others were injured, some gravely.

Disaster struck swiftly early in the afternoon just when engineering efforts seemed about to be crowned with success. A huge crane atop the farthermost of two completed sections of the bridge was about to lift the final link of the west span into position when the whole structure seemed to crumple.

Twisting, tearing girders plummeted down, carrying with them their burden of workmen.

Every available ambulance was speeded to the scene, while police and fire reserves began the work of rescue, grappling from small boats for such of the injured as could be reached. Telephoned appeals for help to the submarine base brought eight divers and their equipment hurtling over the 50-mile distance, preceded by police cars with sirens open.

Meanwhile the banks of the river were lined with thousands who included anguished relatives. As soon as survivors were pulled from the river they were taken to Hartford hospitals. At least five were reported to have had leg injuries.

Hurled to his death was one of the few men who might have told the story of what occurred—W. James Ward, noted engineer and erection superintendent of the American Bridge Co. Ward supervised the construction of the Golden Gate Bridge at San Francisco.

Wider Draft Plan Passed By Commons

By George Lait
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Dec. 4.—The Churchill government won two victories in Commons today despite growing opposition by Laborites.

The government's motion to introduce a measure for thoroughgoing conscription of men and women was approved, 326 to 10, after a previous vote of 336 to 40 had ousted a Laborite amendment calling for nationalization of key industries.

The success of the prime minister's regime in today's action does not mean, however, an end to the Laborite rebellion. Although not anywhere near enough to threaten the government's motions, the 40 dissenting votes by the supporters of the nationalization amendment was an indication of growing opposition. Laborites announced also that a full membership meeting would be held next week to decide what action the party would take when adoption of the conscription measure is asked.

Approval was obtained to introduction of the conscription bill after a long speech by Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin in which he offered some concessions. He promised there would be debate on pay and allowances for services, and that revisions would be made in the future if necessary.

Example To World

Bevin admitted the measure might be somewhat of a bitter pill but declared:

"We are conscious in our own heart that the steps we are taking are an example to the world, that we would rather be wiped out and take this last resort than be defeated."

Support of the conscription motion meant at least a temporary victory for Clement Richard Attlee, Lord Privy Seal and titular head of the Labor Party, and Herbert Morrison, home secretary and minister for home security.

The vote in which the nationalization amendment was defeated followed an appeal for support of the government made by Attlee in the strongest possible terms. He pointed out that a vote favoring the amendment would be a vote against the government itself.

Winding up today's debate, Attlee said:

"The government was created with the sole object of winning the war . . . The cardinal point of its policy is that neither the interests of property or persons nor prejudices will be allowed to stand in the way of achieving that great objective . . .

"'If it is seriously advanced," he continued, "that should further requisitioning of property, services or industry secure a more successful prosecution of the war, the government will examine any specific thing and deal with it on its merits but be guided by this one principle"

The Laborite amendment asked nationalization of vital industries such as transport, coal mining and munitions works.

Finns Hint They May Quit War After Hango Base Victory

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Finland, Dec. 4.—The Finnish high command announced tonight that the Russian evacuation of the Hango naval base had become a disastrous welter of exploding and surrendering naval transports, and newspapers viewed the episode as bringing closer "a victorious end" to Finnish-Russian hostilities.

(This was as far as the Finns would go in indicating that reoccupation of Hango might hasten their withdrawal from hostilities at the side of the Germans. They have been under heavy American and British pressure to stop fighting, and Thursday there were reports in London that Finland had been given until Friday midnight to cease hostilities or face a British declaration of war.)

A communique said the Russian attempt to move between 20,000 and 30,000 men from the Hango garrison to Leningrad by sea was a debacle comparable to the Red evacuation of Tallinn last summer.

Besides numerous vessels sunk at the start of the evacuation, the Finns said one big Russian transport, the Josef Stalin, had been disabled by Finnish shells and drifted to the Estonian coast, where 6000 soldiers aboard it raised the white flag and surrendered.

(The Germans claimed their patrol boats took this ship in tow after it had been damaged in German-Finnish mine fields, and said it yielded 7000 prisoners. The Finns did not even mention the Germans, although obviously the Russians became German prisoners if they landed on the Estonian coast.)

Two other evacuation ships were smashed by coastal guns near Helsinki, the communique related; a third was shattered by an explosion which sent fire leaping high into the sky and at least one Russian destroyer was damaged.

With Finnish troops inching forward through mine-fields and other explosive traps to reoccupy the naval base at the southwestern corner of the country, the press called Hango the symbol of Russia's mortal threat to Finland.

Gunboats Reach Manila On Rough ChinaSeaTrip

Manila, Dec. 4 (AP).—The United States Navy gunboats Luzon and Oahu, of the abandoned Yangtze River patrol, reached Manila Bay today after a strenuous, six-day voyage from Shanghai.

Rear Admiral William Glassford, commander of the patrol, said the light ships—built for river use only—tossed wildly in bad weather which churned the China Sea. He said the vessels were observed constantly by Japanese ships and aircraft until after they had passed the southern tip of Formosa.

D'Alesandro Irked At Hankin's Stand On Subway Plan

In a letter sent yesterday to District Public Utilities Commission Chairman Gregory Hankin, Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, said he was "surprised and disappointed" that Hankin had said he does not believe a survey for a local subway would "produce results."

"A careful examination of my resolution will show it merely contemplates an investigation by the commission to determine the feasibility of a subway system," D'Alesandro wrote. "How can you tell at this time whether such a system is feasible? I am sure a study by competent engineers would answer that question."

Reds 'Mopping Up,' Nearing Taganrog

By Daniel T. Brigham

Copyright by New York Times.

Berne, Switzerland (Friday), Dec. 5.—Along roads littered with debris of wrecked tanks, burning gasoline trucks and discarded arms, Russian forces on the southern front continued their terrific pressure against Col. Gen. Paul von Kleist's forces on the Taganrog Road, clearing up isolated nests of resistance before the town of Taganrog, according to the military spokesman on the Moscow radio early this morning.

In Taganrog itself fresh German troops, rushed from the Perekop Isthmus, are stated to be fighting fierce rear-guard actions in an attempt to stem the Russian advance at least long enough to enable the construction of lines in the neighborhood of Mariupol, where the Nazi forces may be able to establish a Tobruk of their own should circumstances continue to develop in the Russians' favor as they have during the last five days.

North of Moscow the Kalinin-Leningrad offensive appears to be developing, with the Russians claiming "important strategic advances," particularly in the neighborhood of Lake Ilmen, where a total of 21 villages and one town were claimed to have been captured in yesterday's fighting.

Referring to operations on this front, German spokesmen on the Berlin radio late last night admitted that "heavy Russian counter-attacks" had been in progress in the Volkhov area throughout the day. Semiofficial German spokesmen characterized these offensives as "harassing operations." A German soldier correspondent classified them as "offensives," and the Russian military spokesman stated that Soviet forces had made "important progress" during the day's fighting.

On the Moscow front, where particularly bitter weather with heavy snowfalls has set in during the last 72 hours, Russian forces on the northern sector in the neighborhood of Klin claim not only to have repulsed several German attacks but at points to the west of Moscow Canal to have considerably bettered their positions. Russian advances, such as they are on this front, appear mainly due to the successful activities of franc-tireurs, identified as "partisans," roving bands of which continually attack small forces of Germans left behind to guard frozen-in tanks and armored cars. The official commentator gave no geographical indications of the progress on this front, but stated that at one point the Russians had advanced a total of 6 miles after breaking through the Germans' defensive positions.

Experienced

Briton Gives Police Advice On Air Raids

The Honorable Emil Davies is chairman of the austere London County Council, wears a mustache, goatee and a strictly business suit of clothes and says, "You're interviewing me, aren't you? Then let me think up some very human things."

For half an hour, not a question had to be asked him, for the honorable chairman, reclining in the properly relaxed, pleasant manner, on a divan in the Mayflower Hotel, was speaking of American destroyers he had seen fighting submarines at sea. And of blitzes when the chairman had discovered that one of people's first weaknesses was to dash off, leaving and losing their eyeglasses and false teeth.

He is here to tell the National Institution of Municipal Law Officers, in convention at the Mayflower until Saturday, that law officers must remember that the small as well as the large problems of a population under fire have to be attended to, down to the loss of false teeth and glasses.

"We have had to help recover them," said the chairman.

Suicide Squads a Nuisance

"And I should mention the suicide squads, those airmen who might quite possibly sneak in and drop a bomb. Of course they won't get out, but you will find it isn't so suicidal as it sounds for they can bale out, as we call it, in inland meadows and the like and be captured. But it has a great nuisance value, to be coped with. And I should tell you of what the charwoman said when Coventry was attacked.

"Isn't it a shame," she said, "to bomb such a little place; why don't they bomb London that can take it?"

"All of that I mean to show how we're looking on it. We're so much more cheerful now since taking the initiative."

"That's what we've been wanting. The initiative."

About Those Bundles

Then he did grow austere, and sat erectly to say this:

"Please tell the people here this for me. I've been asked by so many to say it: Everyone appreciates the things Americans have been sending. I'm speaking of the clothing. They are appreciative of it. And they won't mind a little human touch, will they? But our women say they find the clothes generally running a little larger to their fit and the British men say the feet of American men must be a little smaller than theirs. I think it's quite interesting. Believe me, we can use it all. It's merely a little sidelight."

He was 19 days on the sea in a Norwegian freighter coming here. Davies said the vessel lost control in a great gale and two United States destroyers fought off an attacking submarine.

"You may say that in my opinion they disposed of the submarine they were after," he said emphatically.

Asked what England is developing out of its trials of war, Davis said "national solidarity." He likes the sound of the words and their strict meaning, he explained.

Petain Asked Axis For Arms, Report

French Proconsul Gen. Maxime Weygand, the apnointment of a new commander for French Africa, the dispatch of German officers and advisers disguised as consular officials to North Africa all show that preparations are made for operations against Britain from Tunisia. It is learned from Istanbul that Italian reinforcements destined for the Libyan front already have been sent to Tunis.

Petain specifically declined to let the French fleet try to battle its way through the new British blockade stretching the full length of the Mediterranean between North Africa and France, the report said.

Germany apparently wanted France to become an Axis common carrier, hauling especially minerals and rubber from the French colonies through the blockade, it was said.

France was said to have been offered, in exchange, almost a preponderant role among the non-Axis powers of Europe in the continental reorganization.

The report said it was also practically certain that the Vichy regime recently refused to let the naval base of Bizerte, in Tunisia, be used as a transit port for Axis war materials and troops en route to Libya. Germany had sought the use of Bizerte to escape the destructive British air and sea blockade of the Tripolitanian coast, it was said.

Brother Slavs Appeal

Kuibyshev, Russia, Dec. 4.—An appeal signed by ten Slav soldiers now in Russia, but from territories occupied by the Germans, calling on their fellow countrymen to desert and join the Polish and Czech armies now fighting the Nazis has been published by the local press and is now being circulated behind the enemy lines.

Axis Near Oil Crisis, Soviet Expert Says

would be running short of oil before the time when they had hoped to be in control of the Azerbaijan area.

"The monthly needs of Germany and Italy and all their armies on all fronts, as well as in occupied Europe, are approximately 2,500,000 tons," said Gen. Kotoff. "This is figured out on the basis of careful estimates and includes all necessities of internal European economy.

"The Axis has lost by aerial bombardment a minimum of one million tons' production capacity since the Royal Air Force began its first raids on synthetic plants and fuel dumps. This figure has been considerably increased since the attack on Russia.

In the 45 days of the campaign against the Lowlands and France the Germans used up 1,500,000 tons of petroleum products in military operations alone. This supplied about 135 infantry divisions, from 10 to 12 armored divisions and about 10,000 planes on active duty.

Figures on Axis Needs

"When one considers the gigantic scope of the present operations, we estimate Hitler's military needs at a minimum of two million tons monthly. This includes all fronts. We consider that the smallest possible figure to continue transport and industry for war purposes behind the lines in the occupied areas and Germany and Italy is 500,000 tons monthly."

"On the basis of our calculations, during one year of military operations on the present scale, the Germans will need 30 million tons minimum of petroleum products and substitutes," Gen. Kotoff continued. "Even supposing that Hitler needs less than I say, we still have the following picture:

"The combined output of German, Rumanian, Polish, Albanian and other occupied parts runs about seven million tons yearly. In Germany, itself, even if we suppose plants have not been disrupted by the bombardments—and in reality they have been—the maximum of synthetic production is 3,500,000 tons annually. The maximum of substitute and ersatz production of such fuel mixtures as alcohol and benzol is about 1,600,000 tons annually. In reserve tanks stored for the future the Germans had total stocks of seven million tons.

"The entire total for one year of war on the present scale is thus 19 million tons. Their need is for 30 million tons yearly. That means they have a deficit—and I include all Europe and the African campaign—of 10,900,000 tons of petroleum or fuel products. This the Germans cannot cover without the capture of new supply sources or extensive outside aid.

Sees No Way Out for Axis

"Now the question has naturally arisen—how can Germany meet this annual shortage of 10,900,000 tons? One way would be the complete reduction of all internal economic requirements, but this cannot be done without great damage to military industries. The second way is to reduce the scale of military operations, diminishing the numbers of tanks, airplanes, et cetera, in operations. But we consider that it will be impossible to do either and they will have a monthly drain of 900,000 tons on their reserve stocks.

"If you bear in mind that the Germans had 7,000,000 tons reserved when the Russian invasion began, it is clear that at best reserves could last only eight months from June 22, even if all production facilities were unhampered, which is not the case. The war has been going on on the Russian front for almost five and a half months. The Germans were convinced they would have the Caucasus by spring.

"I wish to emphasize this, too: If you consider the quantity and quality of fuel and lubricants needed, the Germans face an even more hopeless situation. They are undergoing a very difficult task with high-test aviation gasoline and aviation oils.

Proof of this has already been deduced from official German military documents we have captured. They confirm that the Nazis are being forced to use all sorts of substitute mixtures.

War Sidelights

Italians Surrender to Captured Foe

With A British Advance Striking Force In Libya, Dec. 2 (Delayed) (AP).—A German prisoner told this tale of his capture today:

"I had 20 British prisoners to take to the rear in the region of Tobruk. It was about dusk. The prisoners kept spreading apart. Two made a break, running as hard as they could. I fired a blast with a tommy gun over their heads, yelling at them to halt.

"Up leaped the whole crew of an Italian gun ahead and surrendered to the running Tommies.

"They took the Italian guns and captured me."

Disorders Hinted

Mexico City, Dec. 4 (AP).—New disorders in Nazi-dominated Rumania were hinted tonight in a report from "a positive source" here saying the boy King Mihai had been spirited out of the Balkans into Italy at the behest of the Gestapo, either as an Axis hostage or to guard his safety.

The report was obtained by the newspaper Excelsior just as Radu Irimescu, former Rumanian Ambassador to the United States, returned by plane to Washington after three days of frequent conferences with the abdicated King Carol, who is in exile here with Mme. Elena Lupescu.

The faithful Irimescu resigned as Ambassador to Washington when Carol made a hazardous escape from his homeland in September, 1940.

Excelsior's report said Mihai had been kept under cover in Florence, Italy, since late in November because of a critical situation in Rumania, and the newspaper added that the Gestapo was behind his removal from Rumania.

Excelsior added that an anti-Nazi movement in Rumania would not be surprising.

King Carol professed to know nothing of a Rumanian plot.

Reds Smoke Out Nazis

London (Friday), Dec. 5 (AP).—Picked patrols of Russians are setting the forests ablaze to smoke out Nazi troops defeated in the great rout west of Rostov, it was reported today.

"These scouts are setting the forests ablaze to smoke out sheltering Nazis, and are cleaning up deserted trenches and snow-buried machine-gun posts. In many of these hundreds of German and Italian snipers and gunners are found frozen to death or so weakened they are ready to surrender," the report said.

defensive in the south and told how Italian and Slovak troops were thrown into the bitter fighting.

One dispatch struck a new note in telling of a strong Soviet counter-attack outside the defenses of the Crimean port of Sevastopol.

This foray, said to have been stopped by German artillery, was interpreted as a Russian move to keep the Germans from withdrawing any of their Crimean forces to meet the major Russian push westward along the Sea of Azov.

6000 Are Captured

Most of the high command's report was devoted to the Russian abandonment of Hango, the naval base at the entrance to the Gulf of Finland. Six thousand Russian men and officers were captured at sea when their 12,000-ton Soviet troopship Stalin was damaged by three mines, and two German boats manned by only 80 men towed her to a German base, the communique said.

(No estimate on the strength of either army was available tonight, but at the outset of operations it was believed the British had some 100,000 men and the Axis 80,000, exclusive of reserves.

(In Wellington, New Zealand, Prime Minister Peter Fraser reported severe New Zealand casualties in the fighting.)

The R. A. F. sprayed machine-gun bullets and bombs along the Axis coastal roads and reported many direct hits on one motorized column south of Gambut.

Italian Paper Reports 10,000 British Prisoners

Rome, Dec. 4 (INS).—Italian and German forces in Libya have taken 10,000 British prisoners, captured or destroyed 900 tanks and destroyed 200 R. A. F. planes, the newspaper Corriere Della Sera of Milan claimed today.

(Berlin officials reported the "annihilation" of an entire New Zealand division and said British attacks in the North have "discontinued." They said five British generals were among Imperial forces taken prisoner and included two New Zealand generals and one from South Africa.)

(The German high command in Berlin announced that Stukas had bombed British tank concentrations and mobile columns in North Africa and that "a large number" of tanks and cars had been destroyed. A strong Luftwaffe formation, said the communique, in a night raid bombed R. A. F. bases, war materials and railroads in the Libyan border zone.)

Recruiting Picks Up

Ottawa, Ontario, Dec. 4.—Recruiting for overseas service is now running at the rate of 180,000 or more a year in Canada, according to a spokesman of the defense department. The air force is still proving the most attractive, with a monthly total of 8000 enlistments. The army comes next with 6300 men and the navy with 500.

France Gets Ready for Trial Of War Chiefs

Copyright by New York Times

Riom, France, Dec. 4.—Preparations are well under way for the monumental trial of the men accused of responsibility for France's defeat, which is scheduled to open on January 15.

An underground passage from the prison to the court building is being reconditioned to permit transfer of the prisoners without their passing through the street.

The prosecution has summoned over 200 witnesses and the defense more than twice as many. The prosecutor's evidence covers 100,000 pages. It is estimated the trial will last at least three months.

Only a few, other than witnesses, will obtain admission to the small courtroom. Moreover, the court will clear the chamber during discussion of diplomatic or defense questions.

Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, supreme allied commander during the first months of the war, is still seriously ill but he is improving and it is thought his illness would not delay the trial.

Former Premiers Edouard Daladier, Leon Blum and Paul Reynaud and former Minister of the Interior George Mandel are confined to the premises of Fortress Portalet until their hearing is called. Those who climb the mountain above the fortress can observe these prisoners, who once held France's destinies in their hands, as one after another they appear on a narrow terrace for their daily promenade.

British Change Policy on Navy News in U. S.

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 4.—The British press service here announced today that it would release, on its own responsibility, certain news concerning British naval vessels.

Heretofore the British policy had been to allow the United States Navy Department to control interviews with crewmen of damages British warships brought to this country for repair. One British officer once explained that with the words, "We are the guests of the United States."

There was no indication, however, that under the new policy the British would terminate the United States Navy Department's practice of issuing the first announcements of damaged ships brought here.

The new British system was demonstrated at an interview aboard the British cruiser Phoebe, here for repairs and refitting. The Phoebe's skipper, Commander Frank A. Ballance, talked at length with reporters without the presence of American officers.

He related the experiences of his ship in the evacuation of Crete and Greece and stated that the story was available for immediate publication, except for certain off-the-record remarks. A representative of the British press service made no objection.

When reporters last September 29 interviewed the captain of the British cruiser Dido, a sister ship of the Phoebe, American naval officers forbade publication of certain material, including some that had been broadcast on the British radio and printed in pamphlet form by the British.

Aid to Turkey Stirs Germans

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Dec. 4.—President Roosevelt's announcement that lend-lease aid is being extended to Turkey was a subject of caustic comment among authorized Germans today.

"It is interesting to note the ever-expanding American defense zone now embraces the Near East," one commentator said. "But, mark my word, the last word has not been spoken in this matter."

The offer to Turkey was called an American thrust ("vorstoss") into a region remote from "the legitimate sphere of American interests."

Of relations between Japan and the United States one authorized source said it "is not proper to speak of a crisis in the Far East."

"There cannot be a crisis in a region where a power of such strong nationalistic impulses as Japan has the situation firmly in hand," he said. "The most that can be said is that there are powers outside which try to create a crisis."

Nazis Reported Massing Men On Turk Border

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 4.—Travelers who left Sofia recently reported today, according to European advices to the Associated Press, that Germany is taking military measures along the Bulgarian-Turkish frontier, including erection of highway signs in German pointing the way to Svilengrad, on Bulgaria's Turkish frontier.

What German troops were seen in Bulgaria apparently were headed in the direction of the Turkish frontier, the travelers reported. Svilengrad is the last station on the railway from Bulgaria before it enters Turkey.

Highway signs formerly showing directions to points in western Bulgaria or Yugoslav centers have been removed, it was said.

The general impression of the observers was that while possibly the Germans were anticipating American lease-lend aid to Turkey the comparatively minor German maneuvering was intended to back up Germany in the diplomatic contest for Turkey's favor.

Army of 200,000 Planned by Jews

Nearly 200 representatives of militant Jewry, assembled here yesterday in the Willard Hotel from all parts of the country, opening a campaign to create an army of 200,000 Jews to combat the "Satanic zeal" of Hitler and fight under the British in the "evangelic hills of Galilee."

After hearing a number of speakers including Pierre Van Paassen, foreign correspondent and author, and Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie Institute, the committee for a Jewish army adopted the following resolutions:

1. The consent for the creation of a Jewish army is an inescapable moral obligation of the civilized world to the earliest and most persecuted victims of Nazi aggression.

2. That the British government be urged to cast aside those considerations of appeasement toward the anti-British and anti-Jewish Arab elements in the Near East, which have hitherto withheld from the Jews the opportunity to fight as a free unit.

3. Organize registration of men free from draft duty in the United States and prepared to enlist in the Jewish army.

4. Organize various training centers for personnel in Canada, as have other free forces.

5. Call upon President Roosevelt to take such steps as are necessary under the lend-lease powers to allot the necessary equipment sufficient to create a free Jewish army to serve in cooperation with the British forces.

Speaking of the men in the proposed Jewish army which it is expected will be recruited mostly from the population of Palestine, Church asserted, "When he enters the battle with all his comrades, he will realize that Israel is facing a foe that has persistently robbed and degraded and murdered his race; and he will fight with a grim determination to inflict a retribution that will be so terrible that history will provide no parallel for its consumate execution."

Von Paassen joined Church in a radio broadcast from the gold paneled, marble columned Willard Room. He spoke from beneath the grouped flags of all the Allied nations.

"You can't have either peace or democracy," said Col. John Henry Patterson, an Englishman who commanded an all-Jewish unit in World War I, "in this world while there are millions of persecuted, homeless Jews left to rot in Europe." He expressed his certain knowledge of the worth of the Jewish soldier under fire from his experience with them.

Louis K. Fitch, member of the King's Council of Canada, a former member of the Canadian Parliament, stated his country would support the cause of a Jewish army and shall welcome the Jewish training camps which will "no doubt be opened for that purpose."

Other speakers included Oscar Gavrilovitch, Royal Yugoslav consul in New York, and Representative Andrew L. Somers (Democrat), of New York. Among the many messages received was one from Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, who said "Free men everywhere are arming for the defense of democracy. I send my best wishes for the success of your movement."

The all-day conference concluded last night with a social dinner in the Willard. Today the representatives plan to return to their homes to organize and perfect their plans.

Ten Georgia Colleges Lose Merit Rating

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 4.—Ten State colleges of Georgia were dropped today from the accredited list of the Southern Association of Colleges and secondary schools because of "unprecedented and unjustifiable political interference" by Gov. Eugene Talmadge.

Gov. Talmadge brought charges on which the board of regents of the Georgia university system dismissed Dr. Marvin Pittman, former president of Georgia Teachers College, and Dr. Walter Cocking, dean of the school of education at the University of Georgia, charging that they favored the teaching of whites and Negroes in the same schools.

Today's action by the association becomes effective September 1, 1942. The following institutions of higher learning in the Georgia system are effected:

University of Georgia, Georgia Tech, Georgia's State College for Women, Georgia State Woman's College, Georgia Teachers College, Georgia Southwestern College, Middle Georgia College, South Georgia College, North Georgia College and West Georgia College.

Nine units of the University of Georgia — its medical and law schools, three Negro colleges, two agricultural experiment stations, its evening and extension schools — have not been accredited by the association, and hence were not covered by today's action.

An association official said credits of the medical and law schools were recognized by the American Medical Association and the American Bar Association, respectively, and any disciplinary action against the schools was in the jurisdiction of those associations.

The action will not affect credits earned by students prior to September 1 of next year, and the Georgia Schools may apply for return to the accredited list at next year's meeting.

Serb Patriots Take 2 Towns, Red Radio Says

By the United Press

London, Dec. 4.—The Moscow radio said today that the Yugoslav "patriots" army, reportedly opposing seven full German divisions (105,000 men) in the Serbian mountain wildernesses, had recaptured the important towns of Cacak and Uzice, inflicting heavy losses on the Germans in a battle still under way.

The radio said the Germans attacked the Serbian-held town of Rudnik and were thrown back, losing 600 men killed or wounded.

Another 35 German storm troopers were killed in a battle near the village of Joshanitas, after which the Germans fled, abandoning large stores of guns and ammunition, the radio said.

(The London radio was heard in New York broadcasting that the Yugoslav "patriots" had captured a general named Putchinikov, commanding troops of the pro-German Serbian regime, and that he had been court-martialed and executed for killing war prisoners.)

In recapturing the two towns, the Serbs "disposed of the traitor agents of Nedic" (Premier Gen. Milan Nedic, head of the German-sponsored Serbian regime,) the Moscow radio said.

Martin Sees G.O.P. Return To Power Soon

Topeka, Kans., Dec. 4 (AP).—Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., chairman of the National Republican Committee, said tonight those who profess to believe the G. O. P. is not "a strong, virile, vigorous party destined to come back into power simply are closing their eyes to the plain implications of the future."

"Wait till the people get their tax bills next March and in March 1943," he asserted in an address prepared for the biennial convention of the Young Republicans of Kansas.

"Wait until after story after story and tale after tale and instance after instance of utter waste in national defense and in nondefense expenditures are revealed. Wait until instances like the Wolf Creek sheel loading plant at Milan, Tenn., are multiplied over and over again, as they will be."

Hits at Dictatorship

Calling for a return to a "balanced biparty government," Martin declared that dictatorship does not necessarily mean the rule of an individual despot.

"It may be the rule of a group, or a clique or a party. Mono-party government could be a dictatorship just as surely—and as disastrously—as a one-man government could be.

"To reestablish that system of balanced biparty government, we must, in 1942, take control of the House of Representatives. No constructive opposition can be either constructive or an opposition if it lacks the power to make its views respected and considered, or if it lacks the means to reach the people."

Martin appeared on the same program as Alf M. Landon, who asserted: "It is ridiculous to talk about a party as much in the minority as we are in the National Congress—which under recent court decisions and administrative policies is superseding the Legislatures of 48 States—fostering a constructive legislative program.

Duty to Criticise

"That is my answer to Josh Lee (Oklahoma Senator), and the rest of the Administration spokesmen who are attempting to use the holy cause of national solidarity in this great crisis as a smoke-screen to stop all criticism of the domestic policies and the national defense failures of this Administration."

The 1936 Republican Presidential nominee added: "It is the necessary duty of a minority party to criticise under our form of democracy.

"It is not the job of Republican leaders to run interference and break ice for the President, although I am sorry to say that is what some of them have been doing in these last few months, particularly on our foreign policy, of which no one can be sure."

House to Study Small Businesses' Place in Defense

By the Associated Press

A House investigation of how the Nation's small businesses are faring under the defense program was authorized yesterday. Without opposition, the House adopted a resolution by Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, creating a seven-member committee to conduct the inquiry. By custom, Patman probably will be named chairman of the group.

The Senate Naval Committee and other Congressional committees have already made some investigations into the small business situation.

Before the House acted, Representative Halleck (Republican), Indiana, chairman of a similar Republican committee appointed months ago, declared the formal Congressional inquiry should have been started long ago.

N. A. M. Elects Steel Official Its Chief

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 4.—The National Association of Manufacturers tonight elected a steel man who was head of its national defense committee to its presidency, called for a "single agency with a single head" to direct the Nation's defense, and heard the Administration accused of contributing to "apathy regarding the emergency."

The new president of the powerful manufacturing group is W. P. Witherow, president of Blaw-Knox Co., of Pittsburgh, who succeeds Walter D. Fuller, president of Curtis Publishing Co.

In full assembly the delegates adopted a platform declaring:

"If defense is to be speeded up and its cost held down, the existing confusion resulting from the conflicting authority and the overlapping of Governmental committees must be ended.

"There should be a single agency with a single head who has full power to supervise and guide the defense program.

Weir Demands "Some Profits"

Ernest T. Weir, chairman of National Steel Corporation, told the industrialists that the Roosevelt Administration "need examine only its own conscience to find the reason" for apathy toward the defense effort.

He further asserted that the Administration "ignores the mandate of the American public" on domestic affairs and warned that "Government had better leave some surplus" of profits in the hands of business.

The steel man, long a bitter critic of the New Deal, spoke to an audience which packed the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria and filled three galleries.

This was the audience which yesterday voted in favor of Federal legislation to block strikes in defense industries and which gave an ovation today to Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, author of the antistrike bill which was approved Wednesday by the House of Representatives.

The delegates heard William H. Davis, chairman of the National Defense Mediation Board, warn: "To try to put the lid on labor organization in this country at this time would, in my opinion, be disastrous."

In his prepared address, Weir asserted: "The Administration is supposed to be greatly concerned over public apathy regarding the emergency. There is no doubt that apathy exists. It is worthwhile to examine into the reasons.

"The principal reason is the Administration itself. . . . If there is national apathy, the Administration need examine only its own conscience to find the reason, for the Administration has not been fair and frank with industry or the people.

"So far, its moral leadership has consisted mainly of attempts to scare the country into a super effort and of exhortations to sacrifice and unite.

"Sacrifice comes from example; unity from confidence and understanding. Yet the Administration refuses to sacrifice one whit of politics, power or reform."

The convention adopted a platform for guidance during the ensuing year which called for a "correction" of the labor situation.

"Every strike now," the platform read, "is a gift to Hitler—paid for by the American people—paid for not only in dollars and cents but in the loss of badly needed defense supplies and civilian goods.

"We are convinced that the American workingman does not approve of needless work stoppages called by selfish labor leaders. He does not want American labor blamed for slowing up defense.

Calls for Clear Policy

"If we had a clear and fair national labor policy we would not have these strikes and other work stoppages. Labor leaders would not be allowed to take advantage of the emergency—to force unwilling men to join or stay in a union—to establish closed-shop monopolies—to insist upon the check-off of union dues and assessments—to carry on rival union fights—to set aside local government and establish mob rule—even to defy the President of the United States himself.

"The present situation must be corrected. We need a far-sighted national labor policy that is fair to all.

"The foundation of such a policy should be the right to work and the right to employ. . . .

"The right to strike must not be used to destroy the right to work or the right to employ.

"It should be illegal to call a strike (1) unless more than half the workers affected vote for it by secret ballot properly supervised; (2) when there is no dispute with the employer—the so-called sympathetic strike; (3) to settle a dispute between rival unions; (4) to bring about a closed shop or any other form of labor contract leading to a union monopoly of employment. . . .

"The welfare of the employe, the employers and the public at large requires that labor unions as well as corporations be legally responsible and fully accountable for their actions and those of their agents. This would weed out labor racketeers and thus protect the public, the individual laborer and the well-run union."

The N. A. M. members adopted a resolution in which they said, "We reaffirm our support of the essential objectives of the two Federal securities laws, the proper protection of investors against fraud, and unwarranted lack of information.

"We urge, however, that any forthcoming amendments to these laws embody first and foremost the alleviation of unnecessary burdens upon American industry in order that investment and capital in honest business may go forward with the least possible interference."

Trailer Camp Trio Sentenced For Slaying; Boy Gets 12 Years

Special Dispatch to The Post

Bel Air, Md., Dec. 4.—Dramapacked scenes were enacted in a crowded courtroom here today as three runaway "trailer camp kids" paid for their share in the roadside slaying of Grainger G. Browning, 38, itinerant carpenter, last October 12.

As Judge Frederick Lee Cobourn sentenced Herbert H. Cox, jr., 18-year-old Alexandria, Va., youth, to 12 years in Maryland Penitentiary, the sobs of his mother, Mrs. Herbert Cox, echoed through the room. The youth silently wept.

Mrs. Arthur M. Price jumped from her seat when her 15-year-old daughter, Ida May, collapsed upon being sentenced with Leona Ellen Cunningham, 14, Alexandria high school students, to the Montrose School for Girls until they become 21—or earlier at discretion of institution officials. Nearly 100 high school children were among those in the jammed courtroom. Judge Cobourn said he hoped they "may get some object lesson."

The two girls had to be helped from the courthouse to the county jail across the street. Judge Cobourn said he will sign committment papers tomorrow. Young Cox was to be taken to the penitentiary in Baltimore immediately.

In sentencing the young trio, Judge Cobourn termed their parents: "People of moderate circumstances . . . Respectable . . . Hard-working, God-fearing." He declared that for them "every impulse, every emotion arises. Those in no way responsible for the crime usually suffer more," he said.

Robert H. Archer, defense counsel, had entered a plea of guilty in second degree murder for young Cox on condition that murder charges against the girls be dropped. The girls pleaded guilty as accessories after the fact. All three had been indicted for slaying Browning.

In accordance with Maryland jurisprudence, the defense could ask that the case be tried either before a jury of before the court. The latter procedure was chosen.

Browning was fatally shot while giving the trio a lift in their plan to run away from the Alexandria trailer camp where they lived with their parents. As they drove north, not far past Baltimore, Browning was shot through the head, his body dumped into roadside thicket. The trio then continued on to Portland, Me., where the youth had relatives.

Watchman Freed in Shooting

Harry Rithman, auto sales company night watchman, was yesterday declared innocent of shooting three Northeast youths last July by a Criminal Court jury. The 58-year-old defendant was acquitted on three counts of an assault with a dangerous weapon indictment.

Rithman was accused of wounding George Kalavitinos, 18; Peter Catucci, 18, and Natali Caponiti, 17, at the Ourisman Chevrolet Sales Co., 610 H Street Northeast, where he was employed as guard.

Defense Attorneys William Lichtenberg and Samuel Barker contended that the boys were trying to crash an employes' party in progress on the roof, and that Rithman was performing his duty in keeping them out. Rithman asserted that he fired his revolver at the ground in self-defense when the boys started to attack him.

The watchman, who lives at 608 H Street Northeast, was freed after a two-day trial and an hour's deliberation by a jury of 11 men and 1 woman.

Georgetown Prep Beats Loyola High Debaters

Georgetown Preparatory School debating team yesterday defeated a team from Loyola High School, Baltimore, taking the affirmative on the question of whether the United States should adopt compulsory military training for youths "of age."

Members of the winning team were Rufus S. Lusk, jr., Augustine Rayes, and Joseph Keenan. Loyola was represented by John Kernan, Edward Shea and George Goepzki.

Prize Novel Topic At Critics' Forum

The Rev. Robert J. Slavin, O. P., of Catholic University, last night at the Critics' Forum, in the Mayflower Hotel, discussed the 1941-42 Harper prize novel, "Marriage Is a Private Affair," by Judith Kelly.

The Forum, under direction of the Rev. John K. Cartwright, pastor of Immaculate Conception Church, concluded its last monthly review for the fall season with this meeting.

CIO Here Calls Mass Meeting On Smith Bill

Responding to House action in passing the Smith antistrike bill, local officials of the Congress of Industrial Organizations yesterday decided to hold a mass meeting of District C. I. O. members Monday night at 8:30 in the Press Club auditorium to urge the Senate to defeat the measure.

A special meeting of the Washington Industrial Union Council executive board was called for today to outline the program for the meeting. It is understood that national C. I. O. officials and a member of the United States Senate still to be selected will be invited to address the mass meeting.

The mass meeting will be held following the broadcasting of an address by C. I. O. President Philip Murray Monday night protesting the adoption of antistrike legislation. Principal attention is expected to be focused on legislation before the Senate, rather than on the Smith bill which has already passed the House.

Unions Eager to Prove They Are Patriotic

Local unions, eager to disprove charges that present labor activity has unpatriotically injured the defense effort, are lending increasing volunteer support to defense affairs, a survey showed yesterday.

Principal activity has been the purchase and promotion of sale of defense bonds in which both American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations groups have participated.

With the announcement yesterday that the Carpenters' District Council had decided to place $50,000 of union funds in defense bonds, the total purchased by local A. F. L. unions reached $257,500. An additional 50,000 in bonds has been purchased by the Typographical Union.

Local C. I. O. unions, more recently established and consequently handicapped by smaller treasuries, have not made large purchases of defense bonds, but have tied in the sale of defense bonds to individuals with their organizational drives. Recently the C. I. O. Industrial Union Council announced a campaign to sell enough defense bonds before Christmas to buy a tank.

Defense activity by labor union members runs to other fields also. Both A. F. L. and C. I. O. unions have large representations on District Civilian Defense committees, and union members are regularly urged to volunteer as air-raid wardens and other civilian defense assistants.

Green Blames Drastic Smith Bill on Lewis

The strike of workers in captive coal mines ordered by John L. Lewis in defiance of President Roosevelt and the National Defense Mediation Board was responsible for House passage of the drastic Smith strike-control bill, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, charged yesterday.

Although Green did not mention Lewis by name, he made it clear that he was placing responsibility for present antilabor sentiment in the United States at the door of the man who formerly headed the rival Congress of Industrial Organizations.

"No responsible officer of the A. F. L. has called a Nation-wide strike in any defense industry," Green asserted in a speech at the United Textile Workers convention in the Hamilton Hotel.

Citing the A. F. L.'s announced "no strike policy on defense work," Green said that 99 per cent of the membership of the A. F. L. has refrained from any defense strikes. In cases where defense strikes have occurred, national leaders have intervened promptly to get the strikes settled, he said.

Attacking the Smith bill, which received unexpected approval in the House Wednesday, Green announced that the A. F. L. intends to place its weight against the bill to bring about its defeat in the Senate. He characterized the measure as "hostile to labor."

Francis J. Gorman, of Glen Echo, Md., was elected president of the United Textile Workers of America last night. Following the election, the convention adjourned sine die to meet again in 1944.

Gorman, who was chairman of the union's executive council and served a previous term as president from 1937 to 1939 succeeds C. M. Fox, of Birmingham, Ala., who declined to run for reelection.

Other officers elected were secretary-treasurer, Anthony Valente; chairman of the executive council, William Batty; vice presidents, Gordon Chastain, James Carlen, John Pollard, Frank Sgambato, Carrie Gallagher, Lloyd Klenert, Francis Schaufenbill, and C. C. Collins.

The convention authorized an increase in the per capita tax from 40 cents to 50 cents a month to provide funds for an organizing drive among Massachusetts woolen mills, Southern cotton mills, and Pennsylvania silk mills. The drive is aimed at a 100 per cent increase in membership from 100,000 to 200,000 members by 1944.

A resolution instructing the convention officers to take necessary steps to "protect labor from possible injurious textile price ceilings" was unanimously passed.

Before Green's address, the convention made tentative arrangements for a noon-day march to Capitol Hill to impress the Senate with their opposition to the measure. At the last minute, however, plans were changed, and the delegates were urged instead to pay personal visits to their individual Senators to urge them to vote against antistrike legislation.

The convention which has been meeting here since Monday has passed a resolution expressing its opposition to any antistrike legislation. The convention is being attended by 250 delegates from 18 States and the District.

No Jobs Open, D. C. Just Can't Train Police

There was a mild furore in Washington yesterday when both the Police Department and the Civil Service Commission protested reports that 100 local police jobs are going begging for lack of men.

The Commission asserted—and definitely—that their roles contain more than enough eligibles to fill jobs created by a new Congressional appropriation.

The Police Department denied the Civil Service is in any way hampering the appointment of the additional men, as stated in yesterday's Post. But the Police Department agreed that facilities for training men are limited and must be enlarged before appointments are made.

Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, said that 40 new appointees, already certified by the Civil Service, will go before the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons next Tuesday. Those who pass the physical examination will be trained for police work immediately, the major declared.

Officials at the Civil Service Commission said only enough names are certified to the Police Department to fill current needs and that additional certifications will be made when necessary.

At least 100 eligibles are now on the civil service lists ready for appointment when the Police Department asks for them, the commission spokesman asserted.

Maj. Kelly said the 100 new men will be trained and put into service as soon as possible and indicated he hopes to have the men on the street in less than four months.

The Post's story yesterday, saying the jobs were going begging, was a result of the fact that only 84 certifications were made to the Police Department. This fact was understood to mean the commission had only that number of eligibles. The number, however, represented only a fraction of the eligibles on the commission's list.

Justice Pine Faces 2d Child-Custody Decision Today

Justice David A. Pine, who just got through deciding which side of a divorce-split family should have custody of two tiny Georgia youngsters, will have a similar problem on his hands in District Court this morning.

Mrs. Flora Loucas, of New York City, yesterday asked the court to issue a habeas corpus writ to make her estranged husband, John T. Loucas, of 499 C Street Southwest, surrender to her today their 8-year-old son, Thomas.

Mrs. Loucas charges that the father obtained Tommy "by trickery" from a Port Chester (N. Y.) boarding school on November 16. She says that the youngster's custody was awarded to her under an agreement in the New York Domestic Relations Court last April.

Postlude

Jan Peerce, Frances Nash Please Here

By Ray C. B. Brown

Cappel Concert Guild presents Frances Nash, pianist, and Jan Peerce, tenor (Werner Bass, accompanist) on Thursday night in Constitution Hall. Program of piano pieces by Bach-Busoni, Liszt, Ravel, Albeniz, Griffes and Saint-Saens, and songs by Handel, Torelli, Legrenzi, Meyerbeer, Schubert, Richard Strauss, Faure, Fourdrain, Wintter Watts, Frank Bridge.

BROWN

It was gratifying to observe the manner in which our concert-goers paid tribute to a resident artist last evening when Frances Nash was applauded to the point of ovation in Constitution Hall during her joint recital with Jan Peerce. Too often such cordial demonstrations are reserved for visiting celebrities, but this was an occasion when local pride was justified in expressing itself. Many of the applauders may have been remembering Miss Nash's fine performance of a MacDowell concerto with the Philadelphia Orchestra last season, and welcoming her the more vehemently on that account. One surmises also that the plaudits indicated the hope that her appearances would be more frequent than they have been in recent years.

For the two groups of pieces which constituted her share of the program Miss Nash could not have been wiser in her selection had she meant to exhibit all the facets of her artistry. The two Busoni transcriptions of Bach's "In Dir ist Freude" and "Ich Ruf' zu Dir" displayed the firmness of her tone in dynamic rotundity and the clarity of her expositional phrasing. In Liszt's "La Leggierezza" and the dazzling Toccata, by Saint-Saens, one witnessed her command of dextrous velocity. Her excellent palette of tonal colors shimmered in Ravel's "Jeux d'Eau," Griffes' "The White Peacock" and "El Puerto" from the first book of Albeniz' "Iberia."

Miss Nash has an admirable taste in interpretation and manifests it in the finesse of her phrases. Her playing has a pliability which turns easily from the spectacular to the intimate, from emotional eloquence to picturesqueness. The auditors would plainly have liked more than the two extra numbers she gave them—an unidentified piece and a striking prelude by Mary Howe.

Jan Peerce, who attained the height of an American singer's ambition by making his debut with the Metropolitan Opera last Saturday, was also accorded a very hearty reception. His voice has an appealing quality of lyricism and shows potentialities of power in some vibrant high tones. One had the impression that his method of production does not fully disclose the latent beauty of his tone, for there was a certain amount of constriction.

His offerings were most familiar material. In the first group were combined a recitative and aria from Handel's "Jephtha" and the same composer's "Come and Trip It," Torelli's "Tu lo sai" and Legrenzi's "Che fiero costume." In the grand manner was his reading of "O Paradiso" from Meyerbeer's "L'Africana." The concluding group contained Schubert's "An die Leier," Richard Strauss' "Zueignung," Faure's "Apres un reve," Fourdrain's "Chanson Norvegienne," Wintter Watts' "Blue Were Her Eyes" and Frank Bridge's "Love Went A-Riding." His extra numbers were Leoncavallo's "Mattinata," Rossini's "La Danza" and Victor Hely Hutchinson's "Old Mother Hubbard" in the style of Handel.

D. C. to Take Prints of Some Licensees

Business operators whose activities come under police supervision will henceforth be fingerprinted and photographed before licenses are issued, the Commissioners decreed yesterday.

There will be no cost except the possible inconvenience caused by trips to police headquarters for the process. Establishments which must have permits to function under District regulations will not be charged for the "extra service."

The plan was adopted as a measure to protect the paying public, it was explained. On the other hand, the Commissioners ordered that private groups, who voluntarily submit to fingerprinting and picture-taking, must pay 25 cents a person for each job.

Among those who come under the mandatory, free picture-fingerprint rule to obtain operating permits are pool and billiard hall proprietors; solicitors, private detectives, fortune tellers, clairvoyants, mediums, street vendors, junk dealers, auctioneers, city guides, boxing promoters, liquor license applicants, second-hand personal property dealers and owners of massage establishments.

A special committee recommended the new policy. It included Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board; Ralph Quinter, jr., assistant corporation counsel; Inspector James F. Beckett, of the Metropolitan Police Department, and Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech as consultant.

Ogilvie Sisters Here To Open Beauty Salon

Four Ogilvie sisters from New York came to Washington today to help participate in the opening of the new beauty salon of Ogilvie Sisters, 1212 Connecticut Avenue.

The salon here is operated by Miss Beth Ogilvie, one of the seven sisters—owners of a business whose beauty products are sold the Nation over. Other sisters here for the opening included Dr. Gladys Ogilvie, Miss Jessica Ogilvie, Mrs. Mabel Carter and Mrs. Clair MacInnis. William Ogilvie, of Philadelphia, brother of the sisters and sales manager for business, was also here.

Army Airman Killed On 'Duty' in Africa

Newport, R. I., Dec. 4 (AP).—Lieut. James T. Connell, of the Army Air Corps, was killed yesterday in Africa, Pan American Airways notified his parents today.

The telegram said "death was caused in the performance of his duties," but gave no other particulars.

Fleming Confirmed As Federal Works Chief

The appointment of Brig. Gen. Philip B. Fleming to be Federal Works administrator, succeeding J. M. Carmody, was confirmed yesterday by the Senate.

INTERNATIONAL GOODWILL LUNCHEONS. Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambassador, will be the guest of honor tomorrow at the first of a series of Saturday "international goodwill luncheons" at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street. These events will be arranged by that enterprising young lady, Meredith Howard, and a quarter of the proceeds will go to the American Red Cross in the form of Defense Bonds.

Gloria Vanderbilt will come to Washington for tomorrow's luncheon, society girls will stage a style parade and Miss Howard will interview Lady Halifax during a radio broadcast of the party which gets under way at 1 p. m. If you arrive later than 1:15, you'll be fined 25 cents which goes to the Red Cross . . . Various countries will be honored at ensuing "goodwill luncheons" and will be represented not only by leading diplomats but by their native dishes and favors in the national motif.

Troika will present another bedazzler of a new show on Monday with Clarissa, the dancing "Latin lightning" of several recent Manhattan musicals, and the astonishing Van Gronas, whose dance inspirations derive impartially from Harlem, Park Avenue, waterfront dives and college proms. Thrilling baritoning by Alfredo Sevill who's often sung for the movies.

EPOCHAL LONG DISTANCE PARTY. Omar Hunt, of the OPM, staged an unprecedented party by remote control in the Metronome Room last night. He couldn't get home to Indianapolis to join in a triple party celebrating the birthdays of his wife and daughter and the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Edgerton.

So ingenious OPM-er Hunt had telephone and amplifying connections made between the Metronome Room and the recreation room of the Edgerton home in Indianapolis. With earphones on his head Mr. Hunt introduced Layton Bailey's band to his Indianapolis party, friends, acted as emcee for the party hundreds of miles away.

AMBASSADOR'S HANDWRITING. Lucille Lincoln, handwriting expert of the Cafe Caprice, is all excited over her newest prominent client, the Belgian Ambassador, Count van der Straten-Ponthoz, says his fine vertical writing indicates both power and [illegible]deuness.

"PARLEY" EATON, singing and clowning saxist of the Rainbow Room's Meyer Davis orchestra

NEPTUNE JAMBOREE. The Note Blenders, young fellows who do remarkable things with sweet potatoes and a toy piano, were away out ahead for top honors in the Neptune Room "talent tryouts" on Tuesday. Preety Joan Crowder sang "Sleepy Time Down South" for second honors with the Marian Middleton-Dick Nelson team and cute Margaret Curry running so close that we think they ought to get in on another of these events. Eunice Lowry, a Cherokee Indian lass, gave a grand blitzkreiging to the "Sugar Blues" . . . You'd better get there early for the next "talent tryout." S. R. O. prevails by 10 o'clock.

The colossal Three Murphy Sisters (each as big as a blimp) will finally arrive in the Brown Derby on Monday. Al Simmonds says they were late on their original date because they have to travel by tractor.

MINNIE, THE CAT, is the temperamental member of Dachington's Animal Circus at the Casino Royal. Big, white Minnie can do tricks as cleverly as the frisky little dogs. But after she'd finished her stunts the other eve, she wandered around meowing boredly, finally sat down with her back to the audience. We expected for her to look around any minute and say, "Isn't this a so-and-so of a way to make a living?"

CROCHETING CHANTEUSE. Those bits of crocheting on which Helene Standish of Paul Young's is working every minute when she isn't singing, are squares for a bedspread. When she's made about 400 of them, the bedspread will be finished,—and so will Helen. . . . . .

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE WEEKEND. The satiny vocalizing of the Six Debutantes and Lester Cole at the Shoreham, especially in "Summertime" and the "Irish Medley" . . . The Versailles combo of Cuban and Manhattan dance music by the orchestras of Russ Hawn and Jack Fernandez. The floor is equally crowded for both type of rhythm . . . The afternoon cocktail hour in the Cosmos Room with Carmen Cavallaro playing his newest ones for rapt collegiates . . . If you've a fancy for ge-sizzling Porto Rican music, don't miss the Copacabana, where the maracas and rhumba drum have that savage throb . . . Luncheon at the Hi Hat tomorrow will be glorified by lovely Viennese waltzes played by the Cavaliers . . . The Romany musical motif is given a handsome whirl by the Plymouth Gypsies with black-eyed Sylvia Gould, accordionist, all dressed up like a gypsy queen . . . At O'Donnell's Farmhouse you'll find that Organist Ivan has an appropriate tune for every party . . . And if you're a real stay-upper, you'll never miss the new Crossroads, where the weekend crowd is sure to be tremendous, will include scores of musicians and entertainers who've gone Crossroading after their own spots have closed.

Tommy Johnson, of Burt's Trans-Lux, is a premier boogie-woogie organist. But he spends his spare time in Restaurant "823" listening to the Heifetze Brothers play Tschaikowsky.

TECHNIQUE WRESTLING. Guitarist Billy Gibson, of Paul Kain's Mayfair Five, is working out an unusual triple-control of his new electraharp never foreseen by even its makers, excepts to use this technique in unique classical solo work. This striving for superresults is typical of Billy, who is recognized as one of the country's finest musicians, is often requested by manufacturers to test out new instruments.

EXOTICALLY RUSSIAN is the new Balalaika from its unique balalaika orchestra to the little brown bears that frolic on the painted windows. Truly Russian, too, are its colorful revue and entertainers; Vava Bajon, Lola Lolik, Dena Lorena and all the rest of these brilliant folk. The Balalaika revue, say connoisseurs, is the sort of show you'd have seen in St. Petersburg in the days of the Czars.

The Lotus will present an all-new and glossy big floor show on Monday. This gives you just three days more to catch the current "Bird of Paradise Revue," one of the best in 1941.

KAVAKOS' WEEKEND REVUE starts tonight and will continue over Sunday. Two shows each evening, with country dancing that's a floor show in itself on Sunday afternoon. The way that Kavakos patrons cut up on Sunday afternoon, in "The Grapevine Twist" and the "Wabash Cannon Ball" is a caution.

YOU SHOULD KNOW that Olmsted's often arranges large club and organization parties in its private dining rooms, is expert in handling such events . . . That Hogate's serves special dinners for children.

SUBURBAN BRIGHT SPOTS. Boulevard Farms. Brisk and smart dance music by the Boulevardiers and, for an added dividend, movie comedies on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Some recently shown Charlie Chaplin shorts had the customers in stitches.

Nightingale. A big place and a big band, Jack Maggio's 13-man outfit—but it's always crowded. Dance music is both sweet and swing. The 'Gale is only a couple of miles below Alexandria.

Log Tavern. Strictly New York type dance music by Garry Black's nine-musician band—and every one of them smart swingsters. Open every night in the week, including Sunday.

French Hold Key Position Near Surinam Bauxite Mines

French Guiana's position on the northeastern coast of South America took on added significance with the dispatch of United States troops to guard the bauxite (aluminum ore) mines in neighboring Surinam, points out a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. Since the German conquest of the mother country, the French colony has been loyal to the Vichy government.

"Bordered by Brazil on the east and south, French Guiana is the smallest of the three European colonies in South America," the bulletin explains. "Surinam or Dutch Guiana, a Netherlands possession, lies across the Maroni River to the west. Its capital, Paramaribo, is 260 miles along the coast from Cayenne, the capital of French Guiana. British Guiana is directly west of Surinam.

"From French Guiana the distance across the Atlantic Ocean to Dakar, French port in northwest Africa, is about 2200 miles. North and west over the jungles and mountains, the Panama Canal is about 1700 air miles from Cayenne.

"Development of French Guiana, which is about the size of Maine or Indiana, has been on an even smaller scale than in the adjacent British and Netherlands territories. One reason is that it has been known primarily as a penal colony. For nearly a century convicts have been sent from France to the Guiana mainland or to Devils Island, a somewhat barren bit of land about 30 miles off the coast. Although the French government announced in 1936 that no more prisoners would be placed on Devils Island, it was decided two years later to add another thousand long-term convicts because of the crowded conditions of French prisons.

"Like its neighbors, French Guiana is mountainous and heavily forested except for the coastal lowlands. The climate is tropical, for the country is not far north of the Equator, and the rainfall is heavy. At Cayenne rainfall averages 130 inches a year.

"Only eight or nine thousand acres of land are cultivated; so that agriculture does not play a major role in the colony. Sugar, coffee, and cacao are exported, and the banana market is increasing. The residents grow maize, sweet potatoes, and cassava for their own use.

"In an effort to develop the interior of the country, the French government in 1930 made the hinterland a separate territory, called Inini, but left it under the supervision of the governor at Cayenne. There are few roads, and the rivers are not navigable very far inland because of waterfalls and rapids. Consequently, the rich forests have been put to little commercial use. Rosewood and its essence, as well as tulipwood and balata gum have been marketed in small quantities.

Work to Begin Next Spring On Washington's 'Sky-Road'

By Howard F. Wentworth

Post Staff Writer

Work on Washington's first and only elevated motor "freeway"—the long-planned, two million dollar by-pass route around Georgetown—will begin early next spring, it was learned last night.

Preliminary plans and specifications have been completed. They show a graceful, sweeping "sky-road" along the line of waterfront K Street, connecting Key Bridge with the present span across the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway.

Commissioner Guy Mason described the new project as a "beautified" Pulaski Skyway—the New York-New Jersey super highway crossing both marsh land and river waters.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways—"father" of the new project—said he anticipated completion of the gigantic job by December, 1942.

Capt. Whitehurst released first drawings of the raised highway last night, explaining that construction would be of masonry and steel, molded to conform with Washington "aesthetic" building designs.

Ultimately, Whitehurst reported, the "sky" route would run eastward from Rock Creek along K Street, beneath Washington Circle and connect with the improved portion of the thoroughfare extending to the Public Library.

The road surfacing will be concrete. Whitehurst said he expected the entire project to be started by the middle of March or first of April.

Completion of the job will be welcomed by traffic authorities, who have long attempted to solve the irking rush-hour congestion problem along Georgetown's M Street.

Traffic along K Street fronting the river will be undisturbed after the elevated structure is placed in operation, Whitehurst said. Motorists may use either route, depending on their destination and hurry.

'Two-Faced Woman' Stars a Duplex Garbo

Star Continues as Comedienne in Trite 'And Trivial Palace Farce That Is Mildly 'Amusing and Never Afraid of the Fire

"TWO-FACED WOMAN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a screen play by S. N. Behrman, Salka Viertel and George Oppenheimer, suggested by a play by Ludwig Fulda, starring Greta Garbo, with Melvyn Douglas, Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Ruth Gordon, Robert Sterling and Frances Carson. Directed by George Cukor. At Loew's Palace Theater.

ONE IS INCLINED TO ACCEPT at face value the once prevalent rumors that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were driven to such desperation in their search for a suitable vehicle for the superb talents of Greta Garbo that, all other avenues proving barren, they decided finally to capitalize on the popular success of the Garbo laughter in "Ninotchka" and cast her again as a comedienne who might both laugh and dance in something called "Two-Faced Woman."

Disclosed yesterday for the first time locally on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, "Two-Faced Woman" revealed itself as a shallow and transparent marital farce of a genre which, a few decades ago, would have appealed irresistibly to Al H. Woods' enthusiastic predilection for domestic fables frankly centering in the boudoir. It is a matrimonial masquerade in which the two principal characters are safely married, to be sure, early in the action, but when the ski-instructress and ardent advocate of the outdoor life, wed to the urbane young magazine publisher, decides to impersonate a twin sister of more sirenic impulses to woo her husband away from his metropolitan infatuations, her inflammable methods rather singe the wings of connubial convention. Larry Blake, of course, falls topknot over toes in love with his sister-in-law, eventually perceives the many virtues of her sister, at last discovers the deception, and finally decides to insure his future happiness by falling in love all over again with both desirable young women in the single person of his wife.

The comic structure, obviously, is the standard framework of all extravagantly sensuous exposures of the weakness of the stronger sex. Mrs. Blake makes a bit of a monkey of her lord and master and in having so much fun in the process no doubt will arouse the admiration and envy of all the less intrepid of her gender.

The piece, trite and trivial as it is, is by way of being something of a tour de force for its star. In differentiating the identical twins, Garbo draws a sharp line between the circumspect bride and the international seductress. Her Karin Blake is conventional enough, but her Katherine Borg a combustible creation that leaves none of her intent to surmise. In this more incendiary of the dual impersonations, she becomes a cosmopolitan Cleopatra so conscious of her physical charms that she makes the audience startlingly conscious of them, too, whether in her abbreviated swim suit, a revelatory evening gown or a diaphonous negligee. As one who disarmingly "doesn't dance," she creates a sinuous something or other between the rhumba and the conga which she calls the "Chica-Choca"—or perphaps we didn't hear it correctly—that ought to occasion Carmen Miranda an uneasy moment or two over her eloquent undulations. In short, save for Melvyn Douglas' politely perplexed performance as Larry Blake, Miss Garbo is about all there is to "Two-Faced Woman" and even that could have been omitted without great loss. Constance Bennett, Ruth Gordon and Roland Young are minor figures throughout the movement of the play and Robert Sterling, as an ambitious young man-about-town, is no more important and hardly less capable.

M.-G.-M. has given the picture an opulent production with some magnificent skiing shots to open and close the action—Mr. Douglas' amateurism makes these highly amusing as well as pictorially majestic—and George Cukor's direction has overlooked none of the humor of the script and no subtle shade of its sensual implications. But it is still all pretty weak tea if one remembers the same star's "Anna Christie," "Anna Karenia," "Conquest," "Camille," "Grand Hotel" and, yes, even "Ninotchka."

A FitzPatrick Technicolor travelogue, devoted to a cursory survey below the Rio Grande under the title of "Viva Mexico"; "The Flying Bear," a fantastic cartoon comedy, also in color, and an elongated newsreel are the auxiliaries of a feature definitely patterned to the tolerance of sturdy adult tastes.

Look Out, Mister, It's Your Wife!

MELVYN DOUGLAS AND GRETA GARBO
as the husband and his masquerading bride, in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Two-Faced Woman," now occupying the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Constance Bennett, Ruth Gordon, Roland Young and Robert Sterling are prominent, but not too important, in the supporting cast of this latest of the marital comedies

Ameche Reports from London In Capitol's 'Confirm or Deny'

By Richard L. Coe

"CONFIRM OR DENY." 20th Century-Fox picturization of a screenplay by Joe Swerling, adapted from a story by Henry Wales and Samuel Fuller, costarring Don Ameche and Joan Bennett, with Roddy McDowall, John Loder, Raymond Walburn, Arthur Shields, Eric Blore, Helene Reynolds, Claude Allister, Rosemarie Murray, Stewart Robertson, Queenie Leonard, Jean Prescott, Bill Bevan, Lumsden Hare, Dennis Hoey and Leonard Carey. Directed by Archie Mayo. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Inevitably as March 15, there has come to the Capitol screen the adventure of an American newspaperman in London of the blitz. "Confirm or Deny" is its title, Don Ameche is the newshawk who gets things done by talking very fast and Joan Bennett is the lovely dream from the ministry of information. The word is phony.

Since we aren't a foreign correspondent, we have no solid basis for saying how bureau chiefs in the bomb-spattered capital do behave in hours of crisis, but a little voice whispers this isn't it. In his cinematic career Don Ameche has had time to compose the melodies of Stephen Foster and invent the privacy-buster of Alexander Graham Bell, but there hardly seems as much conviction in the stress of bombings, flirtations and masterful heroics of this fictional "Mitch." Recognizing his task, the man of two moods sets out to emulate a talkativewindmillcomingdownthestretch. In this impression he is completely credible.

Of course it would be expecting too much to find a newsman of any conviction in what is, after all, only plot 3-c with a more or less novel setting. The Great Tradition is that all film reporters are either drunks, dynamos and/or both. In "Confirm or Deny" the Tradition is observed with religious fervor.

Boy Meets Girl

"Mitch" heads the London bureau of a great American press association. One thousand papers. Nine million readers. Only a delayed cable to take the precious words to New York. An old duffer in Penzance owns a direct line. "Mitch" gets it from him. Five thousand dollars a week rental. Some of his news comes from Berlin by pigeon. He meets a girl in the blackout. His office is bombed. He has censor trouble. He slips an evening gown from one girl to another. Another office is bombed. A dud becomes the real thing. The girl from the Ministry of Information battles him with bare fists to keep him from relaying the word that the jerry invasion has begun. A 12-year-old fire warden, pigeon-watcher, dies under fire. Our hero sees the light. He doesn't send the message to his thousand papers. And nine million readers. The scriptwriters wipe the tears from their eyes. They writ finis. And "Mitch" sobs. In little jerks. Like this.

Though in its handling "Confirm or Deny" runs the gamut of insincerity, the story certainly has qualities which might have made it credible and moving, but every event, every line is so thoroughly predictable at least 20 winks in advance there's little to be said for it as it stands.

Allen-Kent Turn Scores

Bolstered by familiar turns, the Capitol stage revue is some notches above the picture. Don Rice masters the ceremonies, tossing in at least one joke that's new in his repertoire. Harland Dixon is on for his humorous foot-tappings after the Rockets have had a pleasing start with "Rosalie." Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey being in winter quarters, the cycling Shyrettos switch from the center ring to stage technique in an act that's always good. Allen and Kent contrast their dances with the eternally unprogrammed elderly couple and stop the show neatly, with special applause for the lady in black velvet.

The Capitol's Threesome is busy, too, with Sam Jack Kaufman leading, of all things, the "Zampa" overture, mothballs and all; Lynn Allison conquering a cold to hit the top notes of Victor Herbert's "Sweethearts" and Art Brown directing an old-time melodrama from his glittering console.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Dec. 4.

Col. William J. Donovan, the Co-ordinator of Information, will open branch offices in Cairo and San Francisco . . . Lillian Gish, who returned to Hollywood, to appear in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," will receive $5000 a week from Paramount. Miss Gish also will assist in the preparation of the script . . . Lieut. Commdr. Gene Tunney has been agitating in Washington for the Navy officials to change the uniforms of all American sailors. Tunney wants to violate tradition and have the sailors wear suspenders. He insists that the present uniform, which provides for the trousers to be held up by buttons instead of by belt or suspenders, is conducive to bad posture—stomach out instead of in.

LILLIAN GISH

When Gilbert Miller abandoned his hope of becoming an actor and turned to producing plays, he opened his first venture in Rochester. In the lighting, direction, etc., he used many of the tricks he remembered having been tried, successfully, in many Broadway plays . . . When his play was ready to open, Gilbert invited his distinguished father, Henry Miller, to attend the premiere. That night, after the curtain descended, Gilbert asked for his father's opinion . . . "My son, you will be an excellent producer. The theater needs you, and you will be highly successful," said Henry Miller. "But remember also, that your success will be the triumph of a fourth class imagination over a first class memory."

Last week Joe Lore, a one-time prizefighter who now is a roofer for a L. I. insulation company, was working on the roof of Tommy Manville's home in New Rochelle. That day the stock market had dipped, because of the war news . . . Manville emerged from his house, and shouted to Lore: "Cut out that racket. I just lost $150,000 in the market" . . . The roofer continued his pounding. Again Manville shouted about his Wall Street loss, and complained: "All this is giving me a headache" . . . "Well," the roofer told him, "sign over the rest of your money to me, Mr. Manville, and I'll be glad to take over the headache that goes with the loss."

When Mayor LaGuardia visited New Orleans last week, he made an address in which he discussed the fiction of American neutrality in the European war. LaGuardia then revealed this incident, which occurred during the Yankee-Dodger World Series . . . Fiorello took his son to the ball game, and warned him: "You must be neutral. After all, there's an election to be held, and I'm Mayor of the whole city and need the votes. So be neutral" . . . When the Dodgers got their first hit, the boy cheered—and immediately was reprimanded by LaGuardia. "But I am neutral," the boy protested. "I'm neutral for Brooklyn" . . . "And in the same light," LaGuardia told his New Orleans listeners, "all are neutral—against Hitler.' "

Sol Hurok, the ballet impresario, was asked: "What's the word which describes a ballet fan?" . . . "The word is 'Balletomaine,'" said Hurok. "And here is the proper definition: A Balletomaine is one who wants new ballets and free tickets."

At the Thanksgiving Day dinner at the White House, the President discussed some motion pictures he had seen and offered criticism. He told his family that he had liked "Sergeant York," but wasn't completely satisfied with the casting for the role of "Mrs. York" . . . "I suppose," Mrs. Roosevelt suggested, "you would have given the job to Veronica Lake?" . . . "Yes," said the President. "That I would have done."

When District Attorney Dewey held a press conference last week at his new law office, he presented Charles D. Breitel to the reporters. Dewey told them that Breitel was leaving his job in the District Attorney's office to join him in private practice . . . "And he's a first-class private in the New York Guard, attached to the Seventeenth Regiment," Dewey proudly announced, in introducing his aide to the newspapermen . . . One of the interviewers, Frank Doyle, is a lieutenant in the same regiment. Breitel flushed clicked his heels, and saluted. Lieut. Doyle's face reddened, as he returned the salute—and started interviewing the private.

Playwright

Richard Carlson, costarring with Nancy Kelly in "Fly by Night," is the author of several plays which have been produced.

Christened Him

Willie Best, who appears as Bob Hope's colored valet in "Nothing but the Truth," made his film debut under the name of "Sleep 'n' Eat," having been given that label by Harold Lloyd.

—HEDDA HOPPER—

Sit Still, My Fluttering Heart!

Hollywood, Dec. 4

It hardly seems fair that Twentieth Century should have two of the most fascinating men in pictures working on their lot at the same time. I'm referring, of course, to Charles Boyer and Jean Gabin. Boyer was doing a love scene with Rita Hayworth, who was nervous as a witch (as who wouldn't be?) over being in the arms of Mr. Boyer for the first time, in "Tales of Manhattan."

RITA HAYWORTH

Gabin, who's making his first picture in three years, now speaks English. Said, "I love your country—but I'd love it more if everybody spoke French!" Yes, you'll be able to understand him. But not until you see him in action do you realize the charm the man's got. He's the rugged type, not handsome. But oh, boy! When he winds up, look out!

Since I watched George Montgomery helping Ginger Rogers put on a prop earring, and seeing that she didn't get a white mustache when she drank a glass of milk, and crabbing her in his arms when I asked for a candid camera shot, I don't believe these two are fooling.

Paul Whiteman is attracting much attention in our village. He'll attract more when he opens at the Florentine Gardens. Ferde Grofe will fly out to make a special guest appearance when Paul introduces his "Gotham Suite," which is expected to create as great a stir as his "Grand Canyon Suite."

They're talking of remaking "King of Jazz" with Paul. I wish they would. I'll never forget a Hallowe'en party he gave while he was making that picture. Anybody who's ever heard him play "Rhapsody in Blue" knows how he loves it. During the evening when everybody was feeling gay, Paul and his boys started playing it. But the guests wouldn't listen—which so upset Paul that he went out and cried like a baby.

When Tom Geraghty, who lived in England for years, returned to Hollywood, Nigel Bruce remarked to him, "How emoe? You don't speak with an English accent." "Why should I?" said Tom, "—I've only associated with Englishmen" . . . Tom, who's one of our most prolific writers, is doing "Up in Mabel's Room," but when it's ready for the screen, only the title will be left!

When I was on the "Arsenic and Old Lace" set, Raymond Massey was whacking off a window cord with a huge knife. "Cut!" yelled Frank Capra,—and Raymond did. Danged nigh whacked his finger off . . . In the graveyard set for that picture, Cary Grant had his agent's name carved on a tombstone!

Well, Mama Berle certainly gave Milton's bride, Joyce Mathews, a shower to end all showers. And they'll live under the same roof, which formerly belonged to Tom Mix . . . Bob Montgomery will be home any day now.

In "The Wolf Man" they've had Lon Chaney, jr., as the wolf, scratch Evelyn Ankers, so in case picture's a success, they can follow it up with a sequel in which Evelyn changes into a wolf girl—and scratches him!

Marjorie Reynolds, one of Fred Astaire's leading ladies, has had three separate careers under three names. As a child, she played with Valentino and Viola Dana. Her name was Marjorie Goodspeed. Quit the screen, came back as Marjorie Moore, ingenue with Lew Cody. Then she married Reynolds, and made westerns. Now Paramount wants to rename her. You figure it out!

No Politics, Please

Rumor has it that political pressure has been unloosed upon the District Commissioners to bring about the appointment of certain candidates for the post of rent-control administrator. That, of course, is nothing unusual. But it is difficult to think of a case in which political influence is more out of place than in the making of this appointment. The Rent-Control Act will affect the welfare of many thousands of Washington families. It must be administered with the utmost impartiality, and for this reason the administrator should not be beholden to any politician for his appointment.

It is obvious enough that whoever is named to this post will take upon his shoulders an enormous responsibility. Unless he is a competent administrator and also familiar with the housing problem in Washington, the assignment may easily prove to be a reproach instead of an honor. In any event the importance of the task is such that the position should seek the man. Fortunately, the Commissioners are considering the names of several competent Washingtonians who appear to meet the necessary qualifications. If those officials are strong enough to resist political pressure, they should have little difficulty in making a good appointment.

Of course, the Commissioners themselves have a stake in finding the right man. In the past appointments of this sort have usually been left to the President. Now the Commissioners have a chance to demonstrate their ability to exercise an increasing range of local power for the benefit of the community. The future policy of Congress in delegating local power is almost certain to be influenced by the manner in which the Commissioners meet this test. So the community is watching with double interest the reactions of the Board of Commissioners to this significant opportunity.

More Room

By relaxing the restrictions against rooming houses in residential areas the District Zoning Commission has manifested a proper appreciation of the housing crisis which Washington is experiencing. Literally thousands of new Government workers are coming into the city every month. Existing residential quarters have long since been virtually 100 per cent occupied. Some provision must be made for the newcomers, many of whom are employed in essential defense work. Common sense requires that the way be opened to absorb a larger number in private homes for the duration of the housing shortage.

Citizens would have had good reason to protest vigorously against this relaxation of the rules governing the location of rooming houses if a permanent new policy had been under consideration. But the privilege granted will extend only until the end of 1945. Moreover, the number of lodgers that may be accommodated in private homes in the restricted residential areas is limited to four. That restriction alone will forbid the establishment of typical commercial boarding houses. The essential point, however, is that greater use of private residences has become necessary to relieve a very acute shortage of living quarters.

Even more urgent than this opening of new areas to rooming houses is the construction of dwellings to accommodate many defense workers with families. In a letter to Congressman Lanham, C. F. Palmer, housing coordinator, points out that a program to provide homes for Government workers brought to Washington by the emergency awaits only approval by Congress. But such approval has been eliminated from the Lanham bill as reported to the House. For some curious reason the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds does not appear to regard the Government's own employes engaged in defense work here as proper beneficiaries of the bill. That defect should certainly be corrected before the bill is passed by the House. Private industry has been unable to date to build houses or apartments for families earning less than about $2000 per year. Unless additional units for low-income defense workers can be hastily built with public funds, there is grave danger that anti-Nazi activities will have to be curtailed for lack of personnel.

Labor Law

There can be no question that the Smith bill which was passed suddenly by the House Wednesday night is the country's answer to John L. Lewis. Mr. Lewis' tyrannical conduct aroused Nation-wide resentment. It is said that the legislators, who had been sleeping for months on labor legislation, suddenly found their letterbags full of protests from citizens who saw their own sacrifices jeopardized and the national interest imperiled by one man's thirst for arbitrary power. But bad cases do not make good law. And the object of labor legislation should not be simply to clip the wings of Mr. Lewis, or to prevent any imitation of his soaring ambitions by another Mr. Lewis; the object should be to evoke cooperation from labor in the defense effort while imposing a social responsibility upon labor's unions. The Smith bill goes a long way in promoting such social responsibility. It may go too far to seem fair to the country's workers. But the crisis called for legislative action on our labor front, and the Senate now has an opportunity to tone down some of the harshness and clarify the language of the new bill.

The bill as it stands does not prohibit strikes by imposing compulsory arbitration. This was a wise restraint against the pressures induced by the John L. Lewis spectacle, for laws against strikes do not make men work. Australia outlawed strikes over 40 years ago by imposing compulsory arbitration, but the law was a failure. Even in Britain a similar law introduced during the last war became a dead letter. There must be no curb on the freedoms for which this Nation is fighting and which this Nation hopes to see reestablished as a world modus. What will help to keep men at work is the improvement and strengthening of Government procedures for the peaceful settlement of labor disputes. This is the best feature about the Smith bill. The Mediation Board would get a statutory status, and it would be empowered to order a 60-day "cooling off" period. Workers in this country are as reasonable as anybody else. And, if they are given an opportunity to think over a strike action suddenly decided upon, and to explore peaceful means of settlement, much of our labor disturbance can be eliminated.

But hitherto the opportunity of exploring the way of peace has been blocked in many cases by the workers' own leaders. That and the prevalence of racketeering are reasons that the time has come for imposing responsibilities upon union organizations and union leadership, even though unionism is not fully matured in America. That the workers require such protection was exemplified in the case of the strike at the Allis-Chalmers plant where a minority called the strike and by terror kept out of the plant those who wished to work. A secret ballot, such as this bill calls for, would have exposed these machinations, and made the resumption of work easier. Intimidation may likewise take the form of misinformation by union leaders. There was the recent case, for instance, of John L. Lewis' journal, which flooded the coal fields with a totally false impression of the issue at stake in the coal strike and the decision of the Mediation Board. Union leaders would not be able to dragoon the workers so easily if the protective devices of the Smith bill were in effect. But the Smith bill errs in seeking to be a catch-all of legislative remedies for most of the grievances which have been expressed against labor. It could well be simplified. The language in certain parts is so ambiguous that there would be much difficulty in administering the bill as it stands. For instance, the section against mass picketing is so omnibus that the liberty of the citizen might be infringed under it. Punitive provisions are likewise too rigorous, and there will be general dubiety over the way in which the door is widened to the injunction process against strikes. At this time there should be the minimum of sanctions. The Senate may be expected to remedy these defects, but in its task it should keep in mind that this country cannot afford to allow even a dynamic unionism all the leeway that would be desirable in normal times.

Aid To Turkey

Till now American aid under the Lend-Lease Act has been extended only to those nations actually engaged in fighting the aggressors. This is patently true of Great Britain, Russia, China and the Free French and others of the antitotalitarian bloc. With the extension of lend-lease aid to Turkey, the practice has now been broadened to include a nation which, while not on the firing line, is very close to it.

Turkey happens to be Britain's ally. But while she has never given any indication of abandoning that role, she has so far eschewed active participation in the war. Yet the spread of German forces, first to the Balkans and more recently to the Russian Black Sea area, has given rise to the possibility of a German assault on the Dardanelles and a German drive across Anatolia to the Caucasus, Syria and Irak. Whether Turkey would resist has hitherto been speculative. Recent German reverses in the Rostov area and the British offensive in Libya undoubtedly played their part in weakening whatever disposition to surrender to German demands may have existed at Ankara in the past. Indeed, the very circumstance that the United States Government has agreed to send lend-lease aid to Turkey must be regarded as a certain sign that Turkish surrender to German pressure can definitely be ruled out.

No wonder, then, that the announcement of America's action has aroused a storm of objurgation in Berlin. The Nazis realize that an attempt to use Turkey as a bridgehead to the Caucasus or the Middle East will meet with resistance. In view of Germany's losses in man power and materiel in Russia, this circumstance constitutes a body blow to Hitler's hopes.

Forced Saving

Treasury proposals for a 15 per cent tax on salaries and wages, to be withheld at the source, have met with a very cold reception on Capitol Hill. And so an alternative method of mopping up public income by means of compulsory savings is reported to be under consideration. Certainly some additional curbs upon consumer spending are greatly needed. Wages and salaries are expanding with great rapidity, whereas the volume of consumer goods available for civilian use is steadily being depleted to meet defense needs. Such a situation—with money competing for goods—produces inflation, or rapidly rising prices.

Now for purposes of combating inflation it does not matter whether money is withheld by taxation or by compulsory savings. A deduction of perhaps 15 per cent from the worker's pay envelope would force him to reduce his expenditures correspondingly. That is the main point. Through either taxation or compulsory savings the Government would achieve its purpose of reducing the amount of money in the hands of the public and thus of helping to curb inflationary price movements.

But the pros and cons of the issue cannot be so easily dismissed. Fiscally, taxation is preferable to compulsory savings as a means of satisfying Government needs. Compulsory saving (which mean compulsory lending) would add to the Government debt, and would create post-war financial problems for future Treasury heads to solve. However, from the standpoint of the public compulsory saving, of course, is a much more palatable form of levy. For the enforced abstinence of the saver would be made easier by Government promises to return the sum contributed. Taxes, once paid, are gone forever, but compulsory savings are, well, savings.

Moreover, it is highly important in time of war or grave national crises to keep public morale high. Too many sharp increases in taxes lead to grumbling, and may cause serious political disaffection. Consequently even the British authorities, who have always shown extraordinary political courage in making drastic tax demands upon the people, have resorted to compulsory saving as a means of cutting down civilian consumption during wartime. To be sure, if enough people could be induced voluntarily to save enough of their incomes to neutralize inflationary price tendencies, there would be no possible excuse for us to follow Britain's lead. Unfortunately Treasury sales of defense bonds to date have fallen far short of the sum required to exorcise the danger of inflation.

Another advantage of the compulsory savings plan from the standpoint of the individual would be that it would create a nest egg for future use. A savings fund of this sort would help to tide wage earners over the hardships of a postwar transition period, and would have a generally stabilizing effect upon the postwar economy. To sum up: objections that would be decisive under ordinary conditions lose their force under the pressure of current emergency needs. So it may be that some form of compulsory saving will supply the right answer to the question how to divert more private income into the Treasury's coffers.

MAGH MELL

I go with a girl down April aisles,
My blood in spate as a stream to the sea;
A blossom is vision of God
At touch of my hand she turns and smiles,
Quivering nearer to me.

There is no true love in the paven street,
But only abroad in a quiet place
A blossom is vision of God
Where timid face and sky might meet
But for the twigs' sheer lace.

I come with a girl from an April wood
And my heart with her own is part and all;
A blossom is vision of God
We know not evil, we know not good,
But spring that heralds no fall.

Tax Distribution

It is a high and mighty sounding platitude to say that we are financing the war in order to save democracy. If this is true, why is a 15 per cent tax to be levied on low-income groups who, because of increased living standards, find it more than a task to keep body and soul together. Only a fool could not understand that a 15 per cent tax on a salary of $1200 a year is a greater burden than a similar levy on say, $25,000 a year. There is not a true American man, woman or child who would not give his all to save those dear Stars and Stripes from defeat on land or sea; but this proposed tax on low-income families is not justified and shall not be justified until Congress makes a hard and fast excess-profits-tax law by which to divert all profits accruing from the national emergency.

Definition Of Democracy

It was with more than ordinary interest that I read the letter of Mr. George Mason Dillard in the November 28 issue. Throughout this entire letter there seems to run a major theme of deprecation of the term "democracy," with a minor tremolo on the "emotional" and "rational" elements in man.

Assuming that there is some consistency in Mr. Dillard's argument, the logical formulation of his thesis would be: the rational element in man is better than the emotional; democracy is based on the emotional element; ergo, democracy is bad, because it is irrational.

In developing this thesis Mr. Dillard makes much of the fact that the word "democracy" is not mentioned in the Constitution, whereas the word "republican" is. Thus he attempts to marshal a tradition to support his logical premises.

Let us deal with his "tradition" first. As a student of the climate of opinion during the eighteenth century, Mr. Dillard ought to know that the word "democracy" meant to men like Jefferson and Madison a direct voice in governmental affairs; the word "republic" meant a representative system. In the Tenth Letter of the Federalist Papers Madison expounds this difference well. The concept of "republic," then, is what is existent today; the concept of "democracy," which, in the eighteenth century, was always qualified by the adjective "pure," was considered as applicable only for small communities. In effect, then, the difference lay, not in the qualities of personal liberty involved, but the nature of the participation of the individual citizen in governmental affairs. A voice he would have, either way: one, directly; the other, through representation. Basic rights would, and should, be guarded either way.

One must stress this point, in the light of the fact that Mr. Dillard refers to Macaulay's letter to Henry S. Randall on May 23, 1857. For the edification of those who do not have direct access to this letter, the following sentences are by Macaulay: "I have long been convinced that institutions purely democratic must, sooner or later, destroy liberty or civilzation, or both . . ." "I never . . . uttered a word indicating an opinion that the supreme authority in a state ought to be entrusted to the majority of citizens told by the head, in other words, to the poorest and most ignorant part of society." Finally, in emphasizing his objections to democracy, Macaulay states: "Here (England) the supreme power is in the hands of a class, numerous, indeed, but select . . ."

It is interesting to observe that on August 18, 1937, President Roosevelt, in dedicating the ceremonies attendant upon the 350th anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare, also referred to Macaulay's letter. As he then stated, "Macaulay was opposed to what we call 'popular government.'" This is true. Macaulay simply had no faith in the people as such. His ideal group was that "select" group of propertied men.

Against Macaulay, let us place two Americans. Lincoln and Whitman. Perhaps Mr. Dillard will say, "But you are choosing two men whose authority I will not accept." Well, then, let us go back a few ages before. Let us take the Bible. Surely, Mr. Dillard cannot claim that this book, too, is prejudiced. If the Bible means anything to the psychical life of man, it means this: man, as a creature of God, has individual responsibilities which none but God can take away from him. Only to God does man have to bow the knee and bend the head. Translated into social life, this implies that only in that form of government in which man chooses his own representatives, which representatives are subject to his future approval or disapproval, does man adequately express his true nature. No other man can, or should have the right to speak for another man without the latter's express admission. None of your "select" few. Education that few may have; property they may posses; but the right to dictate to another man without recognition of the rights of that man, never.

It seems to me that Mr. Dillard is somewhat off in his psuedopsychology in his differentiation between "emotional" and "rational" elements. In the first place, I don't believe any social psychologist will allow such a rigid demarcation as Mr. Dillard will have us accept between these supposedly distinct attitudes. Anyone who works with people day in and day out knows that the process of rationalization goes on consciously and unconsciously. I don't know what Mr. Dillard means, then, by "emotion," or "reason," for that matter. Where does one begin and the other end?

It seems to me that the word "emotion" has been invested with a negative connotation, and made to act as a weasel word; like Humpty Dumpty in "Alice," it is paid two cents extra and made to mean what the author wants it to mean. I don't know whether democracy is "emotional" or "rational," using Mr. Dillard's terms, but I do not believe that those who have to accept totalitarianism are going to quibble about the words. One thing they know, and know full well: they are not free men. And they want to be free. If by being free, they choose a nonrepublican form of government, that's their business. But they must choose it themselves. That's democracy. Even Lincoln admitted that the people of this country could vote themselves out of a republican form of government; but the people would have to do the voting.

In conclusion, then, I believe that one should understand that a democracy today implies the right of free men to make choices of their own will. This democracy has chosen the republican form of government. In eighteenth century terminology, it might be called a "limited democracy," but democracy it remains. And there are quite a few of us here in America who want to keep it so.

Toy Campaign

Now that the aluminum campaign is about over, how about the toy campaign? About this time last year there was a good bit being said and done about it, but this year I haven't seen much, if any, mention of any movement toward it. I mean the fixing up of old and discarded toys for needy little ones, for they, as well as the more fortunate ones, will be looking in glad anticipation toward Santa Claus' visit.

And about that dear old friend and the children's trust and belief in him, I was glad to see our lovely First Lady's interest in that same subject. It seemed to be a plea for us grown-ups to not rob the children of their faith and belief in that dear old saint of their childhood, and I am 100 per cent with her!

Let the grown-ups have their wars and battles with this hard old world, but hands off the tender little ones' beloved dreams and their sturdy faith in good old St. Nick and the fairies! I often look back to the scenes of my childhood and one of these, the sweetest of all, was Christmas and its Fairy Godfather Kris Kringle. A feeling of gratitude always rises in my breast toward my mother for her self-sacrifices in fostering and keeping alive in me such exquisite dreams and ideals. She was honor and truth personified and never a shadow of a doubt of her being aught else ever entered my mind just because she allowed me to indulge in these beautiful beliefs and dreams, the priceless possession of which is second nature to a happy childhood. Those who believe otherwise are part and parcel with those of whom our Saviour spoke when he said: "Ye strain at gnats and swallow camels!"

But back to the toys. Rather than let the discarded or broken one be thrown on the ash heap, give them to some one who will fix them up for some child less fortunate than your own. Explain to your child that Santa is going to bring him new ones if he will give the old ones to some one to fix up to be taken by Santa to other children. His generous nature will assert itself and he will be only too happy and willing to share his treasures with others.

Pacify Me

I remember reading some years ago a story of a small boy whose mother returned after an hour's absence to find the boy in a tantrum, shrieking and making trouble generally, and she said, "Willie, what is the matter?" To which the youngster replied, "The nurse won't pacify me."

The story did not state what subsequently occurred, but as one reads of the countless strikes, picketings and trouble generally in mines and factories working for defense, one can readily infer that if that mother had been a New Dealer she would have promptly scolded the nurse and then discharged her.

Incidentally, the reactions of the Japanese to Secretary Hull's position seem in point.

Write In

Hail to the idea of preventive medicine. How to hurry the movement? Write to the Public Health Service every time we're in need of health advice, until in self-defense they devise some new system of health education and administration that will bring a new health era, an era of prevention rather than cure. I'd like a goodly share of the money I pay in for taxes spent that way.

The Post Impressionist

Semi-Blackout

"Maybe a cerebral capillary popped," said the M. D.'s at the clinic, "and if so it's just your good luck to be here." Meaning in their cautious English I might soon have been in an upholstered box prescribed by one of their lugubrious competitors. I had got out of bed that morning with an unaccustomed reel and disconcerting double vision, bumping into door jambs and making offside reaches for faucets and soap. The net result of the uncertain diagnosis was a prescription for a 15-cent black patch to slip over one lens of my glasses. Put on over the left or right eye, it did equally well in giving me clearcut pictures and a straight line of travel.

So, steadied and adorned like a fat old fox terrier named Spoteye, I went about almost as usual except for not driving the car and getting out of such domestic jobs as marking the proper height for skirts with pins. Through the one working eye the world looked much the same to me though a bit sliced on one side. But it soon became apparent the world took a much different view of me, all out of proportion to the way I felt. I had become a common or street variety of cynosure, a victim of a mild form of outrageous fortune, one of the underprivileged entitled to at least a half-size tincup.

My 10-year-old daughter was sollicitous to the point of leading me up and down stairs to an accompaniment of gentle cautions, and both she and her mother wore troubled looks when in the evening I set off for the neighborhood drugstore about two blocks away. There was only a flicker of amusement when I suggested we consult the Seeing Eye about getting temporary use of a one-eyed dog to help me out.

Arrived safely at Harry's store, the three of four members of the Every Evening Club and the pinball plungers interviewed me sympathetically, some of them diagnostically, and proffered smokes and "eye wash" at the soda counter. Switching the patch to the other eye, which move by that time had become a reliable laugh-getter, brought the atmosphere of the place almost back to normal. Then I was suspected of being a fake and had to explain the flexibility of my disability.

Going to town on the bus or streetcar was actually embarrassing. Men with chests half the size of my coal miner's barrel, and probably with no better props, stood aside when seat space was uncovered by departing passengers. (But, to their credit, not one ever offered the seat he had already nested.) For their kind thoughts these strap-hanging Samaritans got baleful looks, or anyway one-half baleful. I was getting touchy as a derailed "banty" rooster.

At the branch library those restrained young women thawed before me, I thought, and floated the books into my hands. But they did collect a fine for keeping a book past the due date—40 cents worth past the due date—such is the force of habit and the librarian's fetish of good housekeeping. I had a silly notion to ask if "The Light That Failed" had been published in a two-volume edition, but saved myself through sheer will power developed during my wobbly and bumping period. Also I was not inclined to take chances on having my spare damaged.

Out for a walk with grandfather's ivory-knobbed cane, now become useful and a joy to whack along with its horn tip, I saw two small colored children approaching down the sidewalk. Evidently they saw in me something that made the day brighter and funnier. When they came close they began chanting "Got a black eye! Got a black eye! Got a black eye!" one of them making a finger circle about one of his own eyes.

I said "So's your old man!" but they kept up the black chant until their voices were faint and, for all I know, they may still be crying it on the radio and for phonograph records. Well, let 'em! They'll get more out of it than there was in it. And look at the crooners who got a start that way!

In a busy downtown store where it's every animal for himself as in whippet races, I was tacking for a revolving door in close competition with a two-eyed hound who carried no weights. He had almost taken the edge from me when suddenly he slowed up as if he had hit loose sand. I went on out, riding my momentum, but through the tail of my uncovered eye, which happened to be on his side at the time, it seemed to me he had taken a deferential attitude. He looked as if he would more likely pick up a ball or a rubber bone than bite a one-eyed rabbit.

The day before I shed the pathetic patch for good, I was twisting my way across homeward traffic, turning my head wisely like the old owl with his unswiveled eyes, when a roadster I had not seen came blustering up and gave me the fish horn. By this time I had concentrated a tankful of vituperation of the phosgene type for all the kindly disposed who would have outlined my path with velvet ropes. I turned on the squawking roadster which was heartlessly trying to drive a 50-per cent blind man out of his legal right to block traffic. The vituperation evaporated from my tongue out of my open mouth. I smiled, but the product must have looked a little silly. Driving the roadster was a smiling redheaded sight for sore eyes, a friend I hadn't seen in weeks. She was offering me a ride home. I got in, took off the patch to look as sound and fit as possible and began the story of my double vision.

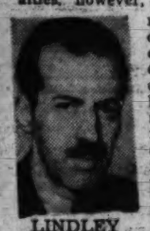
Appeal To Industry

By Ernest K. Lindley

The War Department Meets Labor

CONGRESS IS writing a defense labor policy. A negative policy of restrictions and penalties, however, cannot achieve maximum production. This can come only from enthusiastic cooperation of labor and management. The need for positive methods is recognized in the War Department itself, traditionally employer-minded and less patient than most employers have become with collective bargaining, not to mention strikes.



LINDLEY

It can now be disclosed that for three months the War Department has been engaged in a campaign designed to enlist the full enthusiasm of both managers and workers in key defense plants. This campaign has had the collaboration of Sidney Hillman's labor division of OPM and of local union officials where plants are well organized, as well as of company and plant managers.

The methods used are simple. Most important is a series of "good will" visits by delegations of Army officers and enlisted men. In each case the delegation has been composed chiefly of officers and men who use the particular implement made at the plant. For a day or two the visitors mingle individually with the workers, learning how the weapons are made, and generally exchanging views. At least one mass meeting is held, addressed by one or two of the visitors, a representative of the company, and usually one or more local union officers.

THE FIRST of these good-will visits was to four aircraft-parts plants in Cleveland. Next came three ordnance plants in Toledo; then two Chicago meat-packing houses. These were followed by visits to plants in seven other defense production centers: St. Louis, Seattle, the Philadelphia-Camden area, Boston, the Los Angeles airplane factory area, Minneapolis, and Akron.

Each visit received local publicity, but its relationship to a broad campaign was not disclosed. Although not accurately measurable, the results have been most gratifying, according to the testimony of managers, union officials, and individual workmen. Requests for good-will visits to other plants are piling up rapidly, and in several of the plants already visited both managers and workers have suggested return engagements at monthly or quarterly intervals. The suggestion is made often that delegations of workmen be taken to Army camps to see finished equipment in use.

OFFICERS who have made these trips report that the workmen invariably take pride in demonstrating their machines and skills to the men, from generals down to privates, who use the finished product. They report also that workers, especially on parts of intricate weapons such as tanks and planes, are often pleasantly surprised to find out how important these parts are. In one instance some jeeps and half-tracks were taken to a Toledo factory making axles, and the workers for the first time saw and rode in the vehicles on which they were working.

The remark of a woman working on collapsible boats in the Goodyear plant at Akron is quoted as indicative of the reaction of workers: "I knew I was doing important work, but I never knew how important it was."

THE CAMPAIGN was set in operation September 1 by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, who was disturbed not only by defense strikes but by widespread apathy. It had been suggested by Lieut. Donald Robinson, former labor editor for a New York newspaper, now with the Procurement Division of the War Department. Its active director is Lieut. Col. A. Robert Ginsburgh, who for several years has been the efficient chief of procurement information for the department.

As aide to the Undersecretary, Ginsburgh has been the actual leader of the various delegations, although higher ranking officers are usually present. He also is the principal speaker at the mass meetings. For years Ginsburgh has been "ghost writing" speeches not only for the War Department but for other high officials talking on national defense. Now Ginsburgh has had to deliver his own speeches—and, according to other officers, has delivered them better than most of the principals for whom he previously wrote them. The Ginsburgh theme, severely abbreviated, is this:

"Fellow soldiers of national defense: We in the Army are soldiers on the firing line. You are the soldiers on the production line. Together we make up a team, a team in which we are entirely dependent on each other. If you fail us, we become an Army without arms. If we fail you, you become toilers without freedom. If we in the Army and you in the factory work together and whole-heartedly, America will remain free and unconquerable."

VISITS to defense plants are only one phase of the War Department's campaign. Delegations are sent also to the centers where men and women are receiving vocational training for defense jobs. A third method is the showing, at meetings of plant workers, of Army films of finished weapons in use. Several other sectors of the program are now being organized, with the help of the labor division of OPM.

This sort of positive appeal to industry—managers and workers—is bound to yield greater results than repressive legislation, even though the latter is needed to deal with minorities. Most striking is the fact that it was adopted and is being carried forward energetically by a department of the Government which, by tradition and its own military discipline, has been identified in the past with a reactionary attitude toward labor.

Fair Enough

Disney's Dumbo

THE FRIENDS of Walt Disney will be happy to learn that he is back on the beam after an alarming venture into the god-knows-what and is again the Disney of Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck, the pigs and Snow White. The man who is the author of more gross tonnage of innocent fun, untroubled by the slightest suggestion of politics or social significance than any other human being who ever lived, including Mother Goose, returns to his people with his new film called Dumbo and I defy anyone to discern anywhere in this entertainment any trace of a message to the human race. It is pure Disney, which means that it combines beauty with gentle entertainment, but as the story unfolds on the screen there may occur in the joyous emotions of the beholder a half-felt twinge of pride that this man is an American who has achieved such soothing loveliness out of countless individual drawings strung together and that no other nation on earth, whatever its military power or its artistic heritage, has produced his like or even an imitator.

In a world wallowing in the gore of millions of rascals, dupes and victims, this American artist who, himself, probably could not today draw an acceptable comic-strip, has imparted his strange genius to another great work which manages to ignore evil all about and lift his fellow men for an hour or more into that happy realm which he personally created and which the counterfeiters who try to copy Disney can never find.

I WAS DISTURBED when Disney released Fantasia, not only because the posturing boors of the opening disturbed the night with their self-importance and gin-mill etiquette but because it seemed that he had fallen into the hands of those whom Red Mike Hylan used to call the art artists and had become, like Chaplin and some of the other burlesque clowns and gag writers of Hollywood, a man with a mission.

It was good enough Disney to the eye in spots, but the music was pompous and it seemed that Walt, himself, didn't know what he was driving at but had been sold a bill of very inferior goods by the long-word intellectuals of Goofeyhurst, Calif.

It started nowhere and had trouble reaching even that goal and the noisy, incoherent clamor and the dark writhings of the monsters on the screen so unnerved one emotional cosmic commentator that she thought she detected fascism lurking in the shadows and screaming along the soundtrack. The lady could have been right, for the sound and shape of fascism are to each individual his own idea, as we observe when a dictatorial boss with a storm of goons under his command denounces as a Fascist everyone who stands out for individual freedom and respect for the laws against assault with intent to do great bodily harm.

BUT IF there was fascism in it, that was unintentional because neither Disney, himself, nor any of the reviewers who discussed Fantasia could analyze it. It was as much vegetarian as anything else and any critic would have been justified in lifting for his piece that night the old dispatch of the country correspondent at the train wreck, "All is confusion; can send nothing."

I find myself wondering whether this Dumbo picture of a baby elephant in a circus who learns to fly with his outside ears and does his unhappy mother proud in a great triumph was turned out during that time of bitter meanness when the unions closed in on the happy shop in Hollywood and old friends became enemies through the needling of the unioneers. If so, it is a marvel that the picture came through without a trace of the hatred that ran along the picket line and penetrated the studio and this would be to Disney's credit, too, for the merest note of anger would have spoiled it and a man in a fight has a hard time keeping his rage out of his work.

Americans in foreign lands always have felt a strange pride in their American passports and I think that if I were at a showing of Dumbo or any other true Disney show in, say, Buenos Aires, I might want to say, "that's ours; an American did that."

Drastic Strike Bill

By Mark Sullivan

House Vote Proves Popular Sentiment

AMONG ALL the antistrike bills, the House picked out the most drastic one and passed it. The bill was passed, literally, "first crack out of the box"—the milder measures were not even debated. It was passed in an overwhelming way. The total vote was nearly 2 to 1—literally 232 to 136. More than half the party in power voted for it—129 Democrats for, to 108 against. Thus it was passed by an overriding of the party leadership, for the Democratic floor leader, Mr. John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, voted against the bill, spoke against it, asked all the Democrats to vote against it.

SULLIVAN

To explain what the House did, there is no need to seek deep motives or remote meanings. The House's action means just what the figures tell—that a very large majority of the House believes antistrike legislation to be necessary. A similar majority believes, and has long believed, another thing. It believes that, apart from the emergency of war industry strikes, the fundamental labor law, the so-called Wagner Act, is in some respects wrong and needs amendment.

Those two simple convictions account for what the House did. There were some other factors that contributed emphasis. There was a feeling of resentment against what Mr. John L. Lewis of C. I. O. had done a few weeks ago. There was a feeling that legislation about labor had been restrained for some time past by the President. Attention had been called to this by Columnist Westbrook Pegler, who bitterly reproached Congress for letting the President say what they should and should not do. These matters were in the minds of the House, and contributed a kind of explosiveness in the manner of what the House did.

WHAT NEXT? Before considering that, it will be necessary to determine whether the bill, as passed by the House, is the best possible measure to meet the need. It is a kind of omnibus bill. It includes two separate purposes—the emergency need created by strikes in defense industries, and the permanent need of making the National Labor Relations Act workable. Whether these needs are best met by the present measure can be determined by reflection. Granting whatever modifications may be desirable, the question then becomes, how to get the bill finally enacted into law.

It is generally assumed that the President, and especially certain New Dealers about him, not only do not want this particular measure, but would prefer to avoid any labor legislation whatever. The position attributed to these persons is that they would like to keep the whole matter of the relations between government and organized labor within their own hands, rather than have it written into law by Congress.

UPON THIS POINT sage counsel has been given the President by Mr. Walter Lippmann, a few weeks ago. While Mr. Lippmann is sometimes vague about the allocations of responsibility for government, as between Congress and the President, he is clear about the necessity of Congress writing labor legislation:

"There can be no doubt any longer that . . . it will be a fatal mistake for the President not to invite Congress to express its will on the subject of labor disputes . . . Congress has the right and the duty to declare a national policy on the duty of labor unions, as it has already done on the duty of property owners, in times like these. The President should not carry upon his own shoulders the burden of relations between labor unions and the national defense. In the realm of foreign affairs and in the realm of the strategical command, the President must take the initiative and bear the responsibility of decision. But in the realm of the relations of Americans to one another, of labor unions to employers, and to the Government, he should welcome rather than shrink from coordinate action by Congress."

IF EFFORT is made, by the Administration or any other person or group, to avert final enactment of the present bill, or to emasculate it unduly, it is in the Senate that effort will be made. The Senate as a whole, we can safely assume, feels about labor legislation much as the House does, and much as the country does. Probably the present bill would be passed in the Senate by a majority comparable to that in the House.

Hence the strategy of those who oppose the present bill, if opposition is attempted, would be to prevent it from coming to a vote in the Senate. This strategy has been successful in the past. More than a year ago, similar legislation, in the form of amendments to the Labor Relations Act were passed in the House by a vote of some 2 to 1, but in the Senate, never emerged from the Senate Committee on Labor.

The individuals upon whom most responsibility will rest for action by the Senate on this legislation are the Senate leader, Mr. Barkley, of Kentucky, and the chairman of the Senate Committee on Labor, Mr. Thomas, of Utah. If these two are disposed to give the present bill reasonable expedition, they can help bring it about that the bill should go before the Senate with reasonable promptness for debate and decision, as has taken place in the House. If Mr. Barkley and Mr. Thomas, whether out of deference to the Administration, or for any other reason that appeals to them, prefer that there should be delay, the key positions they hold are such as to give them such influence on the course of the measure.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Season's End

The captain and the teams depart—
The cheers and music quickly fade;
Across fields no officials dart
To say the touchdown was NOT made!

The football pools now get the gate—
No sedans crawl in endless line;
Gone is each awful red-light wait—
And gone my search for Portal 9.

The papers drop those photographs
Of players bent on hot grid wars;
Composed now are the sporting staffs,
And gone, praise be, those airwave scores!

The experts on the pigskin teams
Now turn to less confusing sports—
And I don't have to reconcile
The game I SAW with their reports!

The arguments now fade away—
My home is now a quiet place
And every sport-page photo's not
Some lad just landing on his face.

The office phone does not grow hot
With calls for seats to see the fray;
On weekends I can stay near home
And not catch cold so far away.

No longer must I sit in snow,
In ice or puddles very cold
For no good reason saving this—
It is a custom very old!

Through am I for another year
With treks which burn my tender pups;
And done, praise be, am I at last
With HIGHBALLS OUT OF PAPER CUPS!

The query of the moment: I haven't checked up in a half hour; call up and see if we are at war with the Japs yet!

Costly Winning

On bingo I am pretty wise,
In fact, I just abhor it.
For even if you win a prize
You still pay plenty for it.

Toothpick Parley Suggestions

Dear Hi—

Is a woman to be chosen as one of the possible new toothpick administrators? If not, will you please do what you can to make the administrators see a woman's point of view in the matter! We would not like them shorter for many reasons. We must have them long enough to penetrate a Swedish "kaldolman," and durable enough so they do not break off inside, and of a wood which doesn't burn at moderate heat of the oven. And we must have them of a sturdy wood for cocktail parties.

We would need the toothpicks less sharp, because the children get hurt when they play "Free lunch" and get hold of the toothpick.

Concerning the surface of the wood in the toothpick considerable saving might be achieved by not polishing it. The rough surface, besides, is to an advantage when cleaning houseplants of many kinds of insects.

Worried Housewife

Dear Elmer—

Since the Government is taking over the toothpick business I would like your advice as to what is best for me to do. I have quite a lot of round toothpicks bought under Hoover. Now, do you think it safe for me to keep them or should I turn them in?

Yours,
Headless Henry

There will be no railroad strike. Trainmen will get wage raises and other concessions, including, we understand, larger hammers for those station workers who rap on the wheels.

Retreat From Rostov

By Barnet Nover

The German Blitz Goes Into Reverse

FROM THE VIEWPOINT of its possible bearing on the duration and outcome of the present war the defeat suffered by the German land forces in the Rostov sector can only be compared with the defeat suffered by the German air force in the Battle of Britain a year ago.

NOVER

Germany's failure to destroy British resistance by means of concentrated aerial attacks postponed indefinitely that final victory in the west which the Nazis had confidently expected would be the sequel to the fall of France.

The retreat from Rostov, coupled with the failure of the Nazis to capture Moscow, may have the equally important consequence of postponing indefinitely that victory in the east which Nazi spokesmen have again and again proclaimed as just around the corner.

IN VIEW OF WHAT has been happening in Russia recently, it is interesting to recall what Hitler told his troops on the Eastern Front in the order of the day of October 2.

"Within a few weeks," he assured them, "his (the enemy's) three most important industrial regions will be completely in our hands . . . Today begins the last great decisive battle of this year, . . . The German people . . . will be with you more than ever before during the few ensuing weeks."

The next day, in an address to the German people, Hitler declared that "this enemy (Russia) is already broken and will never rise again."

THAT WAS nine weeks ago. In that period the German armies have made some progress in drawing closer to Moscow, but while the situation of the Russian capital remains critical, it is not hopeless.

Reckoned in terms of distance covered the invaders made greater progress in the south. The fall of Rostov on November 22 was described by the German high command as of "special importance" for the "further conduct of the war."

That was no exaggeration. Rostov's strategic importance is considerable. Had the Germans been able to hold it Russia would have been in real danger of being cut off from the oil of the Caucasus without which she might find it difficult to carry on.

It happened, however, that the Germans could only warm their hands on the fires of enthusiasm generated by the Rostov victory for just about one week. Then, for the first time since the war began, a surprising thing happened. The German high command announced the withdrawal from Rostov, giving the curious reason that this action was being taken in order "to make the most thorough preparations for necessary measures against the population which, contrary to international law, participated in fighting at the rear of the German troops."

THIS WAS TANTAMOUNT to an admission that the German lines in the Rostov sector had been so thinly held as to be at the mercy of Russian guerrilla forces. Later the original German explanation for the abandonment of Rostov was supplanted by another in which the reason for the debacle was given as Russian superiority in numbers and "the abandon" with which they (the Russian troops) were used.

It is apparent that Hitler was talking very much out of turn on October 3 when he declared the enemy broken never to rise again. The Red army has proved the liveliest of corpses. From the practical as well as from the psychological point of view it is of the utmost significance that in the twenty-fourth week of the fighting in the east the Russians continue to possess sufficient offensive power to rout the enemy at a key point on the far-flung front.

FORCE in war is always relative. The Russians are certainly not stronger than they were at the outset of the struggle against the Third Reich. They have suffered tremendous losses in men and materiel, in mineral resources and industrial equipment. But the Germans, for all their outwardly impressive territorial gains, are weaker, too. Their losses have also been considerable and to a greater or lesser extent irreplaceable.

It is of the utmost significance that during the 5½ months that have elapsed since the attack on Russia was launched, Germany has had to abandon its aerial assaults on Great Britain. Now shortages in German man power and materiel are beginning to be noticeable on the Eastern Front.

It is very probable that the German lines in the Rostov sector had been weakened in order to permit a more intensive assault on Moscow. Hitler needs Moscow not merely because the German failure to capture the Russian capital weakens Nazi prestige all the way from Tokyo to Vichy but also because, with the fierce Russian winter setting in the German armies in the central zone are desperately in need of winter quarters.

THE CAPTURE of Moscow would have gone a long way to offset the German rout at Rostov. Failing to take Moscow, the retreat by German forces from the Don Valley metropolis is a severe blow both to their pride and their hopes.

The effects of Hitler's failure to live up to his flamboyant promises are to be gauged by the slowness and hesitation of Vichy in following up the removal of Gen. Weygand by actively joining the now badly battered "new order" and the circumstances that Turkey's position vis-a-vis Germany is now so clear as to encourage the United States to send lend-lease aid to that country.

The road to victory over the Axis bloc may still be long and perilous. It would be folly to minimize the difficulties or fail to reckon on the possibility of serious reverses. Yet light is beginning to dawn. The darkest hours are behind us.

The Gallup Poll

This is the first of a series of three surveys by the Gallup Poll on public health questions.

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 4.—The fact that nearly one-half of all young men called up by the draft are rejected or deferred from full military service because of physical defects raises the question of just how fit the American people are. Shocked by the high ratio of physical defects among draft registrants, President Roosevelt has said that national health is one of the most pressing domestic problems facing the country today.

Since medical authorities trace a definite relationship between diet and physical fitness, the Institute has conducted a survey among American families to determine how many believe their health suffers for lack of money to buy healthful foods.

The results reveal three disturbing facts:

1. Throughout the Nation as a whole, approximately four out of every ten families—or a total of about 12 million families—say the health of their families is suffering because of insufficient money for proper food.

2. This situation shows virtually no improvement over a year ago, despite the increase in national income. In a similar survey in December, 1940, 40 per cent of all families reported lack of money for food necessary for the highest health standards, while today the proportion is 39 per cent.

3. The situation in the lower income levels of the population—families earning less than $25 to $30 a week—is particularly acute. Of all families below that level, 57 per cent are conscious of diet deficencies impairing their health.

The following question was put to a carefully selected sample of adults throughout the Nation:

"Would the health of your family be better if you had more money to spend on food?"

	Today	Year Ago
Health would be better	39%	40%
Health would be no better	61	60

The results in the income groups under $25 to $30 a week are as follows:

Income Group Under $25-$30 A Week
Health would be better	57%
Health would be no better	43

The Institute survey asked next:

"If you had more money, what foods would you spend it on?"

Following is the list of foods which those families who say their health suffers from lack of money would buy if they had more money:

	National	Families Earning Below $25-$30 a Week
"Meat," with beef mentioned first	45%	46%
"Vegetables," with a small number mentioning potatoes	33	34
"Dairy products," with two-thirds mentioning milk and the rest eggs	33	34
"Fruits"	30	30
"Bread, cereals"	5	5
"Sugar content foods"	2	2
Miscellaneous	22	22
Didn't know	8	7

Emergency Defense Powers for Cities Asked

Federal officials were urged to take "a more sympathetic attitude toward local regulations," in exercising jurisdiction over Federal property within a municipality by a special defense legislation committee of the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers meeting in convention yesterday at Hotel Mayflower.

A report of the committee's investigation of legal problems created for cities by the defense program was presented by Horace Edwards, city attorney of Richmond, Va.

The report conceded that Federal officials have exclusive jurisdiction over any area the Government acquires, and that municipal regulations, building codes, and licensing provisions do not apply.

Drafting of legislation to permit cities to reach beyond their own boundaries in the event of disaster and control conditions arising immediately outside their jurisdiction was asked by the report.

These "extraterritorial powers" are needed to permit cities to cope with sudden congestions of populations outside their borders due to some disaster and to provide for effective cooperation of police, fire fighters, and other public agencies at "critical points," the report said.

Delving into municipal regulations covering the departure of employes for military service, the report held that municipal officers would not generally be allowed to retain their offices and public salaries while in service. Public administrators were told not to worry about suffering sudden depletions of their personnel through the draft because of Selective Service regulations permitting exemption of "indispensable" persons for periods of six months.

Cities cannot be sued for injuries occurring in blackouts duly authorized as civilian defense measures provided no negligence is shown, it was reported.

Commenting on his investigation, Edwards said, "the only question to be decided is whether a proposed regulation bears a sufficiently direct and actual relationship to national defense."

Protest Tax Exemptions

Tax exemptions granted by the RFC for defense properties within municipalities present a "serious" threat to city finances, a report of a tax immunities committee declared. The report urged the institute to fight passage of a proposal now before the Senate Military Affairs Committee to grant tax exemption to all British-owned property in the United States.

William C. Chanler, president of the institute and corporation counsel of New York City, declared that successful operation of municipal governments was necessary to prove that democracy is "a competent, efficient and satisfactory form of government."

"If our municipalities are not well-governed; if democracy is not shown to be successful in our efforts at local self-government, then it is not easy for us to stand up today and insist that democracy is the only kind of government which the nations of the world should accept," he said.

"The intricate Federal organization for defense" is geared to accomplish "the defeat of Hitler and the other aggressors," Oscar S. Cox, general counsel of the Office of Emergency Management, told the group. Along with David Ginsburg, general counsel of the Office of Price Administration, he outlined the structural details of the defense set-up for the visiting city attorneys.

Principal speakers at today's sessions of the convention are Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, director of Civilian Defense, and Emil Davies, chairman of the London County Council, who will talk on "Wartime Experience of Cities in England."

Sunshine Girl Looks for Sun

Officials of Southern California's all-winter Sun Festival selected yesterday — the foggiest and rainiest day at Long Beach for several weeks — to present Evelyn Dinsmoor as a contender for the title, "Sunshine Girl." Evelyn flung a rain cape over her shoulders while looking for the sun to break through. She will represent Long Beach in the festival's "Court of the Sun."

16% of D. C. Draft Selectees Rejected During November

About one of every four Washington Negro registrants, and one of every 35 white registrants were rejected by Army induction examiners during November, Selective Service officials here reported yesterday.

Of the 785 selectees, white and Negro, sent last month to induction stations at Richmond and Baltimore, total rejections were 126, or 16.05 per cent.

Lieut. Col. A. C. Gray, local draft medical head said that the "small" rejection rate is very gratifying inasmuch as it indicates the excellent character of the examinations being given by our local board examiners."

The report said that of 441 Negroes sent to Baltimore, 113 were rejected, or 25.62 per cent. Of 344 whites sent to Richmond, 13 were rejected, a percentage of 3.77.

Reasons for rejection at the Baltimore induction station were as follows:

Gonorrhea, 23; illiteracy, 19; syphilis, 14; lungs, 7; psychoneurosis, 6; hypertension, 6; hernia, 6; epilepsy, 5; albuminuria and pyuria, 4; musculo skeletal, 4; mental deficiency, 3; feet, 3; dental defects, 3; visual defects, 2; and others, 8.

Reasons for rejection at the Richmond induction station were as follows:

Musculo skeletal, 3; psychoneurosis, 2; over or under weight, 2; visual defects, 1; ear defects, 1; hernia, 1; feet, 1; heart disease, 1, and mental dificiency, 1.

800 Accepted as Civilian Defense Firemen

About 10 per cent of the volunteers who wanted to be members of Washington's protective auxiliary fire squad have been rejected in physical examinations and will have to find "easier work," Dr. John A. Reed said yesterday.

Dr. Reed, who heads emergency medical services for the District Defense Council, said he and his crew of 12 volunteer doctors have found 800 able-bodied firemen, and will start examining in January for 3,000 auxiliary policemen.

"The percentage of rejections is relatively low, considering that we accepted volunteers up to 55 years of age," he said.

While the volunteers are being examined, emergency medical units are being formed in all local hospitals, Dr. Reed reported.

"About 50 squads made up of four doctors and eight nurses each are being established. More than 100 doctors have volunteered their services to my committee, and really are giving of their time to get the defense machinery in operation," he declared.

When the squads are formed, their "training" will consist mostly of learning the defense manual regulations, he pointed out—since the members already are professionally skilled.

"As for equipment and supplies, I believe the Federal Government should furnish that," he said.

Motor Class to Graduate

Dried Fruits Offer Thrift and Nutrition

By Martha Ellyn

By The Post Food Editor

DO YOU want to lift some of your foods out of the doldrums? Well there is a class of food in the thrift category that can do it. This food is very much in the limelight now, for the Surplus Marketing Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture has placed it on its list to be sent abroad under terms of the Lend-Lease Act. It is also being distributed to public-aid families in this country as well as being made available to the Red Cross to feed war refugees.

Martha Ellyn

This food is dried fruits. The wrinkled apricots, puckered prunes, shriveled raisins, and many other dried fruits can be made into tempting, nutritious dishes. Of course, drying is one of the oldest ways of preserving foods. But along with all the other inventions of the times the dried fruit family, too, has undergone changes, and emerged from its "face-lifting" with new virtues.

In past years you had to think ahead if you were going to use the dried fruits and "soak overnight and simmer until tender." But it is a different story now. You don't need to soak dried fruit any more, for they are deliciously tender as they come from the package. No longer is it necessary to pick each piece of fruit over carefully before cooking. The modern dried fruit is as up to the minute as television, and is appreciated as a most healthful, delicious, nutritionally valuable food which has myriad uses in cookery throughout the year.

We should pay tribute to The Post recipe contestants in their selection of recipes using dried fruits in attractive nutritious dishes. Here are the winners:

Miss Mary Lynne, 415 West Broad Street, Falls Church, Va., winner of the first prize of $10 suggests a dessert made with figs—an ice box pudding that can be made well in advance of serving time and leaves the cook free for other things. Miss Lyne, gives a menu too, as well as the recipe for the pudding. Her menu and recipe follow:

Dinner Menu

Vegetable Cocktail
Celery Ripe Olives
Leg of Lamb Mint Jelly
Mashed Potatoes Gravy
Brussels Sprouts Calavo Salad
Fig Ice Box Pudding Coffee

This pudding is royal fare, and also has the merit of being chock full of vitamins, minerals and natural sugars. It is a dessert you will want to include in your holiday menus.

Fig Ice Box Pudding—Combine 2 cups sliced or chopped dried figs and 1 cup water (approximate) and boil until figs are tender but not too soft (more water may be added if needed, but should be practically evaporated when figs are cooked. Add ½ cup drained crushed pineapple, 1 cup granulated sugar, few grains salt, bring to boil and cook and stir two or three times. Moisten 2 tablespoons gelatin in 4 tablespoons cold water, add to hot mixture and stir to dissolve; cool. Whip 1½ cups cream and stir into the fig mixture. Line a pan or mold, bottom and sides, about 10 by 5½ by 3 inches, with very thin slices of sponge cake or lady fingers, maining fig - cream mixture; another layer of cake, then remaining fig cream mixture; cover with cake and chill until firm. Unmold and frost with flavored, sweetened whipped cream or 7-minute icing. Serves 10 to 12.

Dried apples seem to be as popular today as they were in the days when homemakers dried them to keep them for use in the wintertime. Mrs. B. C. Phillips, 631 Allison Street Northwest, wins the second award with her recipe for Dried Apple Cake. The recipe follows:

Dried Apple Cake—Soak 2 cups dried apples overnight. In the morning, drain, chop and simmer until tender in 2 cups molasses to which has been added 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon nutmeg and ½ teaspoon cloves. Cool. Cream ½ cup butter with 1 cup sugar until smooth. Add 2 eggs, one at a time, and beat thoroughly. Sift before measuring 4 cups flour and resift with 1½ teaspoons baking soda. Mix a little of this flour with 1 cup seedless raisins, cut in pieces and add 1 cup nut meats, so they will mix well when added to the creamed mixture. When the apples are nearly cold, add to the creamed mixture, then add the flour, raisins and nuts a little at a time alternately with 1 cup sour milk. Grease the bottom of a fruit cake pan and then cover with greased waxed paper. Pour in batter and bake at 325 degrees for about 2 hours.

Mrs. Eloise W. Hanover, a teacher in the Leland Junior High School, Chevy Chase, Md., winner of the third prize of $3, offers a recipe apropos of this season. This is a recipe she planned for her students and says the following concerning it:

"In planning this recipe for my students I had in mind the two following objectives:

(a) A holiday sweet to replace the richer, more complicated cakes and pastries.

(b) A quick, easy-to-organize recipe for class use."

The following is the recipe for these Fruit Cake Cookies:

Fruit Cake Cookies—Sift 1 cup flour with ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1½ teaspoons cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg. Cream ½ cup shortening and add ½ cup brown sugar and ½ cup granulated sugar. Beat in 2 whole eggs. Add the sifted dry ingredients, alternating with ½ cup milk. Add 1 cup raisins, ½ cup each of dried apricots and peaches and ½ cup nut meats. Stir in 3 cups quick-cooking oatmeal. Drop from spoon onto greased baking sheet, bake at 350 degrees for 15 or 20 minutes.

Miss Rosetta Ross has a blender or electric liquefier that she uses to make a drink she calls Breakfast Glasses. This is an innovation and those who like their breakfast in one drink will welcome such a recipe. Here is Miss Ross' recipe:

Breakfast Glasses—Into an electric liquefier put, ½ cup milk, ½ cup juice from cooked dried fruit, ½ cup stewed prunes or apricots or dates or raisins or peaches, two egg yolks, or ½ peeled avocado, and ½ cup thin cooked wheat cereal. Run the liquefier until well blended. Makes two tall glasses of the drink.

Muffins, rolls, corn bread, meat rolls and a host of other novel and flavorsome dishes are the suggestions of the following ten $1 winners. Here are their recipes:

Foundation Backs Kenny Polio Method

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis voted its indorsement today of the "work" method of treating infantile paralysis developed by Nurse Elizabeth Kenny, of Australia.

This treatment is directly opposite to former treatment methods of completely immobilizing affected joints and extremities in plaster casts, splints and braces. The Kenny treatment, introduced by her and a staff of nurses in the United States about two years ago, consists of leaving the stricken person as free as possible, manipulating the joints as normally as possible and applying hot packs to aid in restoring the nerves damaged by the poliomyelitis virus.

This method, a revolutionary one, also known as "muscle reeducation," has been viewed with skepticism by American specialists on infantile paralysis treatment but the national foundation granted a small part of its funds obtained in the annual infantile paralysis campaign climaxed by the birthday balls in honor of President Roosevelt to make a critical examination of the Kenny technique.

Today the scientific workers of the national foundation declared "that during the early stage of infantile paralysis the length of time during which pain, tenderness and spasm are present is greatly reduced and contractures caused by the muscle shortening during this period are prevented by the Kenny method.

Congressmen Ask National Lottery After Latin Tour

By the Associated Press

A Congressional committee, reporting on its recent tour of Latin American countries, declared yesterday their system of national lotteries "should be investigated by our legislative committees charged with drafting revenue measures."

"Surrounded with proper restraints, the committee feels it would be quite possible to work out under governmental supervision and participation a program for a national lottery as a means of raising revenue, that would gain the indorsement of the American people," the report said.

The committee members were Representatives Rabaut (Democrat), of Michigan, chairman; Houston (Democrat), of Kansas; Beam (Democrat), of Illinois; Harrington (Democrat), of Iowa, and Carter (Republican), of California.

Somebody's Going To Get Some Slippers, Maybe

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—To the sons and daughters of President and Mrs. Roosevelt: Greetings—and don't go around buying any bedroom slippers as Christmas presents for your children.

Mrs. Roosevelt today bought 22 pairs of children's bedroom slippers. Ten pairs are for boys, 12 for girls, some are red, some navy blue. All are lined with nice warm sheepskin, on which the President's wife had to pay a Federal tax.

She did not say for whom they were intended, but some of them would fit her grandchildren.

Two Killed As Car Hits Pole in Md.

Two men were killed and one was hurt seriously in traffic accidents in nearby Maryland yesterday, and three men injured in local mishaps.

John A. Worden, 70, of Cheltenham, Md., and Frank Kolemia, 38, of Tuxedo, Md., were both fatally injured in Prince Georges County early yesterday. They died at Casualty Hospital.

Worden's automobile crashed into a telephone pole when it ran off the Crain Highway near Cheltenham. The second victim suffered a skull fracture when he missed a curve in heavy fog on the Baltimore Boulevard and collided with a pole at Berwyn, Md.

Hyattsville Man Hurt

John Akers, 36, of Hyattsville, was seriously injured in the afternoon when his car overturned on a turn in the Marlboro-Largo Road, near Western Branch. Taken to Casualty Hospital by the Marlboro Rescue Squad, he was reported to be suffering from a concussion and lacerations of the left ear.

Charles M. Jackson, 31, of Great Falls, Va., a pitman for the Capital Transit Co., received a broken arm in the plow pit at Wisconsin Avenue and P Streets Northwest. He was treated at Georgetown Hospital.

Cyclist Injured

Minor cuts and bruises were received by George Brandon, 18, of Shady Side, Md., when he rode a bicycle into the side of an automobile at Fourth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. He received first aid at Sibley Hospital.

James Ellison, Negro, 31, of 1230 Union Street Southwest, was cut on the ankle when his motorcycle overturned at Seventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. He rode to Emergency Hospital for treatment.

The advisory board of the District Masonic Clubs met last night in the Mayflower Hotel to honor past presidents at a dinner.

Oliver C. Short, present chief incumbent, presided at the meeting as his final act before retiring as head of the board. Honor guests were Charles H. Taylor, national president of the National League of Masonic Clubs, and Edward W. Libbey, deputy grand high priest, Grand Chapter, Royal Arch.

The following past presidents were at the dinner: Lynn H. Troutman, Maj. Walter R. Metz, Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, Melville D. Hensey, John O. Bowen, H. F. Chandler, Donald D. Isbell, Russell H. Thompson, S. P. Lewis, Lieut. Col. Edwin S. Bettelheim, jr., Donald C. Dow and Ralph H. Gauker.

Mailbags Stolen 89 Years Ago Found in Philadelphia Attic

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Dec. 4.—Three bags of United States mail—believed stolen 89 years ago—have been found in the attic of an old Philadelphia house by a young couple renovating the place.

Mr. and Mrs. James Heugh discovered the canvas pouches, faded letters and newspapers dated 1852, in the eaves of the attic of the brick house at 316 South Twelfth Street.

Among the 100 pieces of mail was much material of interest to historians. The canceled stamps also are believed to be valuable.

Postal authorities expressed belief a copy of the New York Herald of November 2, 1852, found in the bags, established the date of the robbery. That was election day when voters chose Franklin Pierce, a Democrat, to succeed New York's Millard Fillmore, last of the Whigs, as President of the then 31 States.

Chief Postal Inspector John W. Johnston to whom the Heughs turned over the valuable cache, said "it will take days of search of old postal records to learn the circumstances of the robbery. We may never get to the bottom of it."

"Autumn of U. S."

The letters were not in envelopes, being folded with wax as was the custom of the time. All the seals had been broken.

There were several letters telling of the mourning for "the late Daniel Webster." One of them, written to an unidentified Yale University student, said "with Webster's death the autumn of the United States is at hand."

There were several Ordnance Department contracts bearing signatures from Rutledge, Vt.; New York City and Philadelphia. There were many personal letters, one draft for $250 and several checks. A bundle contained eight insurance policies, taken out by a plantation owner in Petersburg, Va., on his slaves.

A will, drawn by Ezekiel Eldridge and mailed from Rutledge, Vt., also was found. The will bequeathed all his estate to a daughter, Mary, along with any bounty due Eldridge from his service in the Revolutionary War. The will was dated 1841.

Chicago Booster

An Army officer in a fort in what is now the State of Washington wrote to officials in Washington asking for immediate reinforcements. He said his company had been depleted to 37 privates.

A letter from a "Mr. Warren" to his father described a journey from Detroit to Chicago and predicted that "someday Chicago will rival New York."

Most touching missive was one in the handwriting of a young girl to her sweetheart. She begged forgiveness. It ended "please do not cast from you the one who truly loves you." It came from somewhere in Vermont.

New Holiday Sales Record Predicted

By the United Press

Shoppers are spending more this Christmas than ever before, and holiday retail sales will reach a record $5,500,000,000, the Commerce Department reported last night.

The buying splurge is expected to be 15 per cent greater in dollars and 20 per cent larger in volume of goods than the previous boom year of 1929.

The department said retail sales for the entire year will reach 54 billion dollars—18 per cent above last year, and 11 per cent more than in 1929.

Man and Wife Win Richmond Bridge Match

Richmond, Dec. 4.—For the first time in the history of the event, a husband and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Glick, of Miami Shores, Fla., tonight won the United States mixed Pair Bridge championship, second event of the national tournament being played here this week.

The new champions came from far behind in the final round to win by a narrow margin. It is the first big-time victory for his wife, but Glick is one of the defending champions in the national open team-of-four event which began tonight, and has won another national title.

Successful Tournament

In second place were Miss Ann Bryant, of Kansas City, and Harry Feinberg, of Cleveland, who is also a member of the defending team. Mrs. Albert Rockwell, Warren, Pa., and Howard J. Welsh, Youngstown, Ohio, were third.

The tournament, which according to officials of the American Contract Bridge League is one of the most successful in years, passed its half-way mark tonight with the start of the team-of-four contest. This event will be played in three sessions, ending tomorrow night. On the basis of advance entries, it appeared that Richmond would set another attendance record as more than 40 teams had signified intention of compete. The largest previous entry was 34 tables.

Check Presented

During the evening session, Herbert J. Gerst, Norfolk, State chairman of the Bridge League's "bridge for ambulances" committee, presented a check for $2,000 to Shepard Barclay, of New York, national chairman of the campaign for the benefit of the British-American Ambulance Corps.

The money will be used to buy an ambulance as a memorial to Lieut. Comdr. Heywood L. Edwards, who was lost with the U. S. S. Reuben James. Commander Edwards was an enthusiastic bridge player in Norfolk and would probably have played in this tournament, Gerst said in making the presentation.

Traffic Lights Problem Delays Underpass Project

Improvement of the underpass at the viaduct of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring, Md., is being delayed pending approval of a system of traffic lights by District of Columbia officials, it was announced yesterday by the Silver Spring Board of Trade.

Traffic lights now established at Eastern and Georgia Avenue will have to synchronize with others which are to be erected before work at the viaduct is begun, said Fred L. Lutes, chairman of the committee in charge of the project.

J. D. Draper, president, announced the appointment of the following nominating committee to select a slate of officers for the January election: P. M. Williamson, chairman, Shirley F. Workman, Fred Lutes, Lee N. Robinson and Winship I. Green.

Foster, who has been with the Court of Claims for 15 years, was previously a Representative from Ohio for six years. He lives at 3717 Ingomar Street Northwest.

Named Secretary Of Recreation for Soldiers, Sailors, Marines Club

Appointment of Miss Dorothy B. Quayle as United Service Organizations recreational secretary for the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club was announced yesterday by Mrs. Raymond Fowler, president of the Woman's Army and Navy League.

Miss Quayle was introduced to the board of the league, which owns and operates the club at 1015 L Street Northwest, at its meeting yesterday.

The new secretary, who will arrange leisure-time activities for service men at the club, was graduated from Ohio State University where she specialized in physical education and English. She also has a master of arts degree from New York University, where she took recreation courses.

Her own hobby is art and craft work, and she has written a book on the teaching of pottery-making to beginners. A potter's wheel will be installed at the club for service men who wish to learn this art.

Announcement of new appointments to committee chairmanships was also made by Mrs. Fowler yesterday. Mrs. John Winslow has become entertainment chairman. She has instituted a Sunday "at home" at the club for service men.

Mrs. Henry C. Jewett is new chairman of the canteen committee and Mrs. Sam Karrick chairman of the house committee.

Several new members were introduced yesterday at the meeting, including Mrs. Stanford Hooper, Mrs. David Barry and Mrs. James B. Woolnough.

Crosses Given By Confederate Daughters

Crosses for military service were presented to Rear Admiral James Otto Richardson last night at a meeting of the District of Columbia Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at Confederate Memorial Hall.

The crosses, awarded at the recent general convention of the U. D. C. in Los Angeles to Admiral Richardson as a descendant of a Confederate veteran, were for service in the Philippine Insurrection, the Spanish-American War and the World War.

Mrs. John Collinson, of Baltimore, newly elected recording secretary general, was guest of honor at last night's program which featured a program of music and a reception.

The meeting was a prelude to the District Division's thirty-eighth annual convention, with the business session opening at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow at Confederate Memorial Hall. Officers will be elected at tomorrow afternoon's session. Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr., president of the division, was in charge of last night's program and will preside at the convention.

Annual memorial exercises at 3 p. m. Sunday will be presided over by Miss Martha F. Stewart, chaplain, at Confederate Hall.

Alice Marble Will Address Y. W. Dinner

"Physical Fitness for Defense" will be discussed by Alice Marble, former tennis champion, now assistant director of civilian defense in charge of national physical training for women, at a dinner open to college women of Washington at 7 p. m. Monday at the Y. W. C. A.

The program is sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association of George Washington University.

Mrs. Ketterer Named Head Of Defense Unit

Mrs. Gustav Ketterer, of Philadelphia, has been appointed chairman of the national defense department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, it was announced at federation headquarters here yesterday by Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, president.

Mrs. Ketterer succeeds Mrs. Harold V. Milligan, of New York, who resigned because of the pressure of other duties.

The new appointee has served for the past three years as chairman of the federation's legislation department, and later accepted the chairmanship of the committee on Americanization in the national defense department.

In a statement in connection with her new appointment Mrs. Ketterer said: "One of the first steps toward national defense should be to see that everyone enjoying the liberties, freedom and justice of this country, is loyal to our Government. No effort should be spared to see that civil liberties are protected and to teach people to value these liberties and to use them only in the American way as they were intended.

"We need to break down the apathy existing in the United States toward the grave dangers that confront us. It is important that every clubwoman sign up and be fitted for some particular service in case of emergency. The purpose of our newly created department of national defense and the 14 committees now functioning under it is to offer channels of direct service, and opportunities to train for service through which women may serve their country in this crisis."

Mrs. Ketterer won an award as "the most outstanding woman in Philadelphia" in 1933 by vote of women in organizations in that city and nearby areas. She has served as president of the Philadelphia Federation of Women's Organizations.

Zonta Club Group Moves to 'Adopt' Chinese Orphans

A group of Zonta Club members last night agreed to "adopt" a Chinese orphan apiece for the coming year by contributing funds for food and shelter.

The movement followed a talk which Mrs. Walter C. Lowdermilk, guest speaker, made at the club's "around-the-world" Christmas party at the home of Mrs. Homer Guerry and Miss Caroline Longfellow.

Mrs. Lowdermilk, wife of the assistant chief, soil conservation service, Department of Agriculture, related experiences of her 11-year residence in China. She described a Christmas celebration which she was instrumental in giving in 1927 to 450 Chinese orphans who had never before heard of Christmas.

Members of the club's program committee described Christmas customs in many other lands.

Norway Fight Topic of Talk

Dr. Aase Gruda Skard of Norway, lecturer and writer, discussed "Norway's Fight Today" at the meeting of the Petworth Woman's Club yesterday at Petworth Methodist Church.

After describing conditions which have been forced on Norway by Germany, she stressed the resistance still alive in the Norwegian people.

Mrs. Victor Sehorn, chairman of the Red Cross production unit, reported that in the past three weeks, 69 sweaters and children's suits have been knitted, and 164 women's and children's dresses sewed. She reported the organizing of a subunit of 18 knitters, largely employed women, which meets every Wednesday evening with Mrs. Blair Shoemaker and Miss Lillian Cromelin.

Mrs. Frank J. McMaugh, president, was in charge of the program. The luncheon was served at candlelit Christmas-decorated tables by the hospitality section of which Mrs. L. E. Zabel is chairman and Mrs. G. L. Palmer vice chairman.

Stirlings Discuss Trip to Mexico

Dr. M. W. Stirling, of the Smithsonian Institution, and Mrs. Stirling discussed their recent trip to southern Mexico and showed color movies of it at the meeting of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday at the Y. W. C. A.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Having Married Quietly and Withheld Announcement Because Husband Is Having Surname Changed, Newlyweds Ask Proper Method of Publishing Status

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was married October 28, this year, but the marriage has not yet been announced, because my husband is having his surname legally changed, and the court transaction will not be completed until December 15. His decision to change his name to a simpler, Anglicized version dates back two years;—before we met, in fact.

On or immediately after December 15, we wish to announce our marriage through the newspapers. But we don't know how to go about it. My father is dead and my mother lives several thousand miles from here. My husband has been an orphan since the age of five years. Our wedding was a quiet, civil ceremony, performed in another town, at which no relatives or friends were present. (For one thing, we felt we could not afford a church wedding; and for another thing, we did not want invitations or announcements to go out, bearing my husband's about-to-be discarded family name.)

It happens that I have an older married brother living here, who has always been very close to me. Would it be proper for him to issue the announcement to the newspapers? Also, I should like the newspapers to carry my picture with the announcement. I had a new picture taken just before my marriage, which my husband likes very much and hopes to see published with the announcement. Is it correct to ask this favor of the newspapers? Your advice on procedure will be greatly appreciated.

MRS. N. L.

Bride's Mother Issues Statement

DEAR MRS. N. L.: Your mother's name should be used in authorizing newspaper announcement of the marriage, even though she lives thousands of miles away, has never resided in this vicinity, and is unknown to most of those whom the notice presumably would interest. As to whether it is "correct" to request publication of your picture with the announcement—brides by the thousands (or spokesmen for brides) besiege society editors for this "favor," month after month and year after year. So you certainly would be following long-time, Nation-wide precedent in making the suggestion.

In securing the newspaper's cooperation, ordinary procedure is to provide the society news department with a "glossy print" of the picture you wish published, together with a written (preferably typewritten) statement of accompanying information. In routine announcements of quiet weddings, where the bride's picture is published, the "story" usually is confined to "cutlines," —which is to say, the few lines printed directly beneath the picture.

Apropos of your wedding, such lines might say: "Mrs. Noah Land, whose marriage to Mr. Land took place October 28 in Leesburg, Va., is the former Miss Alva Bexley, daughter of Mrs. Victor Bexley and the late Mr. Bexley, of Oakland, Calif." (It is customary to mention the name of the bridegroom's parents, also, whether living or deceased. But inasmuch as your husband is revising his surname, it might be confusing to readers to note, for instance, that "Mr. Land is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Vlandeveck, of Sedgewick, Conn." So, for clarity's sake, it seems preferable to pass over his parentage.)

The terminology of the "cutlines," however, usually represents the society news writer's efforts,—since the information furnished the newspaper by the bride's family should read, in effect: "Mrs. Vincent Bexley, of Oakland, Calif., announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Alva Bexley, to Mr. Noah Land, of 3650 Blank Avenue Northwest, Washington, D. C. The wedding took place on October 28 at Leesburg, Va. Mrs. Land has been a resident of Washington for the past five years." This allows the newspaper the alternative of carrying the "formal announcement" in the news columns, in the event it lacks sufficient space to publish the picture,—as is often regrettably the case.

In furnishing "copy" of this sort to a newspaper—whether in person or by mail—the name, street address and telephone number of the family spokesman (in this instance, either yourself or your brother), should be included, post-scriptum, in the notice. This makes editorial "verification" possible, should need arise—and directs the reporter to the source of additional information, for a longer story, if such is desired. The fact that your mother's name "authorizes" the announcement doesn't mean that the statement must bear the appearance of coming directly from her. M. H.

(From The Truthtown Torch)

Mrs. Sinbad Smith-Smythe has called off her formal dinner scheduled for next Tuesday because she was unable to get any replacements in her dinner service which originally was imported from England. "I am just using American made patterns for the duration in my informal entertaining," said Mrs. Smith-Smythe yesterday, "but I simply could not afford to give a formal dinner without my Crown Derby china. It does seem as if the Government could have done something about getting through my replacement, as it was only three plates two cups and a saucer.

The Osgood Outlanders, who have taken the Cyrus Barnacle house for the winter, are giving a series of dinner parties. At the first dinner tonight they will entertain socially prominent interventionists. At the next dinner society isolationists will be the guests. At later dinners. They will honor separately rock-ribbed Republicans, Willkie Republicans, old line Democrats and New Dealers and at a final dinner will lump together labor sympathizers, literary people, artists, reformers, mugwumps and professional diners out, whose names are in The Uppercrusters Social Guide.

Orphan Committee

The committee on Emergency Aid to Rescued Torpedo Boat Victims is again without a chairman, Mrs. F. Skiddy de Muchmore having resigned to spend the winter in Honolulu.

Organized last spring by Mrs. Featherton Daubler, the committee has had a succession of chairmen, Mrs. Daubler resigned to head the Committee on Anti-Aircraft Guns for Badminton Courts. Her successor, Mrs. Julian Heathcote Zenith, was ordered by her physician to take a rest. Mrs. Thornberry Flitt served as chairman for two weeks, then left with a group of friends on a Brazilian safari.

Mrs. Saintsbury Spiff succeeded her, but resigned to restore an old house in Adamtown. Mrs. Ditherton Doolittle, the next chairman, had to give up the work on accout of preparing for her daughter Daphne's debut this fall.

The committee probably will be headed by a small roundtable committee in the future to insure some members being in town to carry on the work.

In the Mode

"Aren't you taking your turnip juice?"

"I haven't touched it for three weeks."

"But I thought you had to have K3?"

"Oh didn't you know! They've proved now that turnip juice didn't have the K3 at all!

"No! Where on earth will you get it?"

"Oh, I'm not taking K3 at all any more. Nobody's taking it! All the big doctors are having everybody take M2. They say there's just oodles of it in the coverings of persimmon seeds."

"Well I'm taking watermelon soup every day—for chromium."

"Oh but didn't you know the chromium theory was outmoded?"

"No!"

"Yes! Arsenic's the thing now. Everybody's eating apple peelings to get it. This piece I saw in the papers said you ought to eat at least three yards of apple peelings a day!"

"Of all things! Say, where's a fruit stand?"

"Isn't it pitiful about Harriet Mosey?"

"What?"

"She's still following that parsnip and cod liver oil diet."

"How tragic! Why they've proved now that it's positively suicidal to combine the two."

"I know, but Harriet always was terribly old-fashioned. Why she's not even yet taking her oysters in capsules."

"Why that's positively medieval!"

"You don't mean you are ordering chocolate pie!"

"Oh yes. They say chocolate isn't fattening any more."

"But the starch!"

"Oh but you need starch under the new nutrition theories."

"But all that whipped cream—"

"Well they're just discovered whipped cream has X7—"

"Not that wonderful new vitamin that makes you—"

"That's the one!"

Look Eleven Years Younger

"MY DEAR, have you noticed how old she's getting?" Do these gossipy little whispers follow you around, despite the face creams and the new hair-do?

Then it's time for a new kind of youth-and-beauty treatment, says Gelett Burgess in his dynamic book, "Look Eleven Years Younger." It's time to find out if you're guilty of any of those elderly little mannerisms which shout old age more loudly than a few gray hairs or a wrinkle.

After all, what is old age—really? It's an inner slump, an attitude of "nothing matters any more." And the careless little habits you fall into as you get older are simply its outward and visible signs.

You slouch in your chair, finger boring unbeautifully into cheek. You stare off into space when people are talking to you, punctuate your remarks with vague, two-handed, old-womanly gestures!

To seem young, you have to ACT young—and the first step is to lick the subconscious demon who's always whispering: "Go on, let go." Lick him, says Mr. Burgess, with conscious control!

Are you a "bead-biter," a "foot-fiddler," a "face-feeler"? By watching your actions much as an actor watches his actions on the stage, you can change all that!

Hair, Skin, Nails Reflect Body Health

By Ida Jean Kain

IT IS an exceptional woman who does not think of her hair as having everything to do with the way she looks and no connection with the way she feels. Now, frankly, if you were undergoing medical treatment of any kind, would it even occur to you to tell your hairdresser before getting a permanent wave? The odds are against it. And the results might be awful.

Just as an example of the worst that can happen, Emile Rocketional Hairdressers Association and recognized by the profession as a leading authority, tells of a Scandinavian countess with beautiful, silky blonde hair. She wanted a permanent wave exactly like the one she had had six months before. And since the procedure was on record, that is exactly what she got. But when she emerged, her hair was a dull, coarse brown. It had changed, not only in color but in texture!

Scalp Affected

When the facts came out, it was discovered that the countess was being treated by both her physician and her dermatologist. She is one of those women who believe there is nothing like a specialist. What did not enter her mind was the possibility that the medicines she was taking, the ointments she was massaging into the skin and scalp, and the chemicals in the wave solution might, in combination, produce an unexpected effect. Needless to say, she wore a transformation for some time to come.

See the Doctor

Now for the moral: Don't treat your hair as something apart. It isn't. Neither are your nails or your skin. Anything that affects you generally also affects these—and usually affects them first. Every woman has off-days when she does not look her best. But when these days continue for a long stretch, it would not be too far-fetched to go to your doctor and say, "I am not looking as lovely as I should. I believe I need a thorough checkover." That might bowl him over for a second, but he would admit your logic. It's a much more sensible approach to the problem of stringy hair and a sallow complexion than merely changing your hair-do and cosmetics.

Capital Whirl

By Hope Ridings Miller

If you want to endear yourself to Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, you needn't send her flowers, or candy, or a book. Just gather match-cards for her collection . . . and you'll be her friend for life.

Yesterday at a small luncheon given by Mme. Procope, there was a small red box by Mme. Ertegun's plate. Inside were more than 50 match-cards, from numerous hotels, house holds and hot-spots here and in New York. Seems Mme. Procope has had some of her friends busy collecting match-cards, too . . . but only for Mme. Ertegun.

One of these days you may see a handsome new screen at the Turkish Embassy, completely covered with a patchwork surface fashioned of these match-cards. That's what Mme. Ertegun has in mind, and when her collection is complete she'll have something all-of-a-piece to prove her hobby has been worthwhile. Incidentally, she has been gathering in, and putting away, match-cards for almost four years . . . and her collection now numbers more than 2000 items.

Swedish Artist Coming Soon

Small and informal, the luncheon was one in a series that Mme. Procope is giving this season. Covers were laid for eight, and guests found their places at a table decorated in charming simplicity with a center silver urn, flanked by silver pheasants. Prettier than flowers, and more unusual.

Table talk turned on a variety of subjects, and Mme. Folke Wennerberg said the Swedish painter, Einar Nerman, had just completed a profile portrait of her 20-months-old baby. She added, incidentally, that Mr. Nerman and his wife, who made quite a hit at the Swedish Legation supper party a few weeks ago, were coming down from New York on Sunday to spend some time.

Baroness Korff, another luncheon guest, reported that her son and daughter-in-law, the former Alice Graeme, are now living in New York, and that he is teaching at New York University . . . Mme. Erkki Mikkola, pretty wife of the Finnish secretary, asked the hostess if there would be any chance to see the Procope baby after luncheon . . . "If he's awake by then," promised his mother . . . But when the time rolled around, he still slept on soundly, unmindful of the ladies who were waiting . . . Attractive Mrs. Howard Railey and Mrs. Kenneth Watson were others enjoying the luncheon . . . Mme. Procope will be hostess at a similar get-together again today.

Post-Gridiron Party Planned

Already circled in red on the calendar of a few lucky Washingtonians and scores of notables from out-of-town is the supper party Mrs. Robert Low Bacon will give following the Gridiron dinner on Saturday, December 13 . . . Miss Judith Bayard Cutler, of New York, will be guest of honor when Miss Janet Fish entertains at tea from 5 to 7 p. m., that same date . . . Capt. and Mrs. John P. Jackson are planning a buffet supper for Wednesday, December 10 . . . Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling will give a dinner on Tuesday, the 16th . . . and Miss Louise Clement will fete her post-debt niece, Miss Catherine Clement, at a dinner before the Erwin dance on December 29.

When Mrs. John Gunther moved up her Washington visit one day, there were all sorts of shifts in plans for her lecture and the luncheon Mrs. Frank West will give in her honor. Now, however, the schedule is complete; the date is Tuesday, December 9 (instead of Wednesday, as originally decided), and the place will be the Sulgrave Club instead of the Raleigh Hotel . . . In town for a visit with her mother, Princess Julia Cantacuzene, is her daughter, Mrs. W. Burrell Siebern, of Cincinnati . . . She will be here for several days . . . Miss Gregor Armstrong, daughter of Mrs. Walter Lippmann, who made her debut here recently, will be one of the guests of honor when her father, Hamilton Fish Armstrong, entertains at a dinner dance tonight at Hampshire House, New York.

Florida's Tropic Lure Attracts D. C. Influx

Despite balmy weather here many Washingtonians are going to semitropical Florida to catch sight of a palm tree, sun themselves on the beach or bathe in the surf. Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Fowler have arrived at the Pancoast Hotel for their annual visit in Florida.

With the Fowlers is Reginald H. Foster, who makes his home at the Chevy Chase Club here. He was among the guests at the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey L. Andrews at the Quarterdeck Club when they were hosts in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gorman, members of the Corinthian Yacht Club. Mr. and Mrs. Gorman are stopping at the Pancoast.

Mrs. Robert Forrest will go to her Miami Beach home for the Christmas holidays to be with her daughter, Miss Patricia Charmienne Yarwood, who is a student at Miss Harris' school. Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Harper, of this city, expect to be in Miami Beach, Fla., for the Christmas holidays and will attend the Orange Bowl Game on New Year's day. They will stop at the Versailles Hotel.

Col. and Mrs. Richard F. Lussier, of this city, have joined the cabana colony at the Macfadden-Deauville in Miami beach. The Lussiers were accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. George Morris Cole and her son, Thomas L. Cole. Bernard C. Heaton, of this city, is stopping at the Tatem Hotel. Mrs. William K. Hartung and Mrs. Arthur Browne are in Miami Beach.

Mrs. Ward Entertains For Mexican Artist

Armando Drechsler, Who Painted President's Portrait, to Leave Soon

"In my mind's eye, I saw him sitting near a glowing fireplace, with the dramatic warm red tones reflected in his face," said Armando Drechsler, well-known Mexican artist, at the party which Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward gave in his honor at her home on Massachusetts Avenue, "after 5:30" yesterday. After December 12, those who view his recently completed portrait of President Roosevelt, will see the Chief Executive in just such a symbolic "fireside chat" pose.

On December 12, the Mexican Ambassador, Don Francisco Castillo Najera, will present the portrait to the President in a ceremony at the White House, as a personal gift of the President of Mexico, Avila Camacho. The official portrait painter of President Camacho, Mr. Dreschler has been here six weeks working on President Roosevelt's portrait. Because it is designed to hang at Hyde Park, the President suggested to the Mexican artist the exact dimensions he would like the portrait—a yard square—to fill a special niche in his Duchess County home.

After the presentation ceremonies, Mr. Dreschler will leave for Pittsburgh, where he will paint a portrait of Mrs. Claire Reinhold and from there he will go to Raleigh, N. C., to finish the portrait of Mrs. Josephus Daniels which he started in Mexico. Former Ambassador to Mexico Daniels, whom he has previously painted, was on hand in Washington to introduce him to the President.

Mr. Dreschler started his Mexican artist laureate career as the official portrait painter of former President Cardenas. Since then he has painted almost every important Mexican official and many celebrities who have visited Mexico. Among the Americans he has painted are Paul Getty, of New York; G. C. McClintock, of California, and Militza Korjus, blond soprano of Hollywood and concert fame. While in the Capital he has been working in a studio at Lee House.

Gaily informal was Mrs. Ward's impromptu party yesterday. Guests who "dropped in for a moment" stayed on and on, interested in an artist's impressions of the great and near-great who have posed for his talented brush.

Barbara Vickery Will Make Her Bow At Tea on Dec. 22

Invitations were in Capital mailboxes yesterday for the debut party of Miss Barbara Vickery, statuesque brunette daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Howard Leroy Victory. Miss Victory will bow at a tea dance December 22 at the Sulgrave Club between 5 and 7 o'clock.

Now attending Mount Vernon Junior College, Miss Vickery is planning on an interior decorating career for herself. Her aptitude for sports stood her in good stead recently, when, as the daughter of a Maritime Commissioner, she was called on to wield a champagne bottle over the prow of the Aekay in Chester, Pa.

Mary Kirby Makes Her Debut Dec. 18

Mrs. Kindleberger Kirby is issuing invitations to the debut party of her pretty dark-haired daughter, Miss Mary Jane Kirby, who will make her bow to Capital society at a tea-dance at the 1925 F Street Club December 18. Hours for the event are set from 4:30 until 7 o'clock.

Miss Kirby, the granddaughter of the late Admiral David Kindleberger, has recently forsaken a theatrical career for a secretarial one. A gifted pianist and good horsewoman, she has attended schools in Hawaii and California and will now make her curtsy in the city where her mother, the former Miss Pauline Kindleberger, made her debut.

Brazilians Grace Dinner Party For Younger Set

Sharing honors at the "young set" dinner party which the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Gouthier gave last night in their home on Le Roy Place, were Prince Dom Joao Orleans de Braganca and Mlle. Sybil de Bettencourt. The prince, a member of the once-ruling royal family of Brazil, is staying at the Brazilian Embassy while here on a military air mission. Mlle. de Bettencourt is visiting the Capital with her much-feted parents, the well-known Brazilian journalists, M. and Mme. Paulo de Bettencourt.

The guests last night were Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, who has been entertaining at a series of informal teas in his Broadmoor apartment since his return to the Capital; Prince and Princess Hohenlohe, Etherington Smith, of the British Embassy; Miss Elaine Darlington, Miss Beatrice Phillips, the Commercial Counselor of the Argentine Embassy, Miguel Quirno-Lavalle; Miss Betty Stewart-Richardson, Miss Ruth Dove, Miss Yolanda Dorn, Ware Adams, Lyle Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Holman and Judson Bowles.

Dutch Envoy, Wife Hold Yule Cocktail Party

In the manner of a "Christmas preview" were decorations for the cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by Dr. and Mme. H. R. Van Houten, of the Netherlands Legation. An open fire blazed merrily in the drawing room, Christmas stockings had been hung on the mantelpiece and red candles also enhanced the holiday motif.

Special center of attention was the doll house in the dining room, where guests gathered and stayed. The hostess, receiving informally, was trimly turned out in a softly draped frock of pale green. Dr. Van Houten was here, there and everywhere—the perfect host—continually looking after his guests.

Among those present were Mrs. Frederic Schenck, Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner, Miss Carolyn Nash, George Abell, Mrs. Ives Lowe and Lieut. Otway-Smithers, of the British Embassy.

Especially interesting guests were Mr. and Mrs. James Andrews, the former of whom returned recently from Thailand (Siam). The First Secretary of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Dahlman were there; also, the Norwegian Second Secretary and Mme. Stabell, Edward Van Devanter and Maj. Juan Sedillo.

Still others there included several members of the Netherlands Legation staff, among them Col. and Mme. F. G. L. Weijerman, Mme. H. H. Boon, Mme. Riemens and Mr. and Mme. L. A. H. Peters.

Jacquelyn Knapp, Brother to Give Annapolis Dance

Feting a debutante of the season, Miss Delphine Colquitt, and a visitor from Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Dorothy Giddings, Miss Jacquelyn Knapp and her brother, Midshipman William Marshall Knapp, will entertain at a tea dance in the Mirror Room of Carvel Hall at Annapolis, Md., Sunday afternoon.

Miss Knapp will not make a formal debut this season, but her mother, Mrs. John Harrison Knapp, plans to give a series of parties in her honor.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

JUST RETURNED from a fox-hunting tour in Delaware and Pennsylvania, Mrs. George A. Garrett was out again this week with Orange County Hunt, when hounds met at Rectortown Station at 11 a. m.. In Wilmington she hunted with Vicmead pack, Simpson Dean, M. F. H., and in Unionville she went out with Plunket Stewart's pack.

Mrs. Garrett was hunting the morning that Mr. Stewart was knocked unconscious by a fall from his horse, an accident that has caused his many friends much worry. But reports are that the master of Unionville Hunt is improving daily and will soon be able to ride again.

Before coming back to Virginia, Mrs. Garrett was joined in Maryland by Mrs. Amory Perkins, of Middleburg, and they had a day with Elkridge-Harford Hunt. They sent their horses ahead and enjoyed the tour greatly, having several days of sport. Others hunting with Fletcher Harper, M. F. H. of Orange County Hunt, the day Mrs. Garrett rode with them were Mr. and Mrs. William Langley, Mr. and Mrs. John Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Young, Mrs. Harold Talbott, Mrs. John Butler, Mrs. Norman Toerge, Mrs. Robert Winthrope, Oliver Filley, Horace Moffet, "Son" Dishman and Dr. Archibald C. Randolph.

Cards for a hunt breakfast Tuesday, December 9, have been sent out by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hinckley. Only recently Mr. and Mrs. Hinckley moved into their new home, Henchmen's Lea, which they built the past year. High on a hill in the Old Dominion Territory, it has a beautiful and far-reaching view that is breath-taking. The breakfast will be held at the Hinckley home after the hunt with Old Dominion Hounds meets there at 11 a. m. Mrs. Hinckley is M. F. H.

ANNOUNCEMENTS have been received here from Col. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Minnigerode of the marriage of their daughter, Margaret, to Comte Rene Bouet-Willaumez, on Friday, October 24, in Nevada. Miss Minnigerode has spent much time in Virginia as well as Washington and has many friends and relatives here. She is a niece of Powell Minnigerode and George Minnigerode, of Washington, and of Charles Minnigerode, of Baltimore.

A delightful dinner party was given by Dr. Cary Langhorne at his home near Upperville a few evenings ago. And at an afternoon "drop in" party recently Mr. and Mrs. Paul Llewellyn entertained a number of their friends. They are so busy going back and forth to Washington these days that their friends see much too little of them. Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn have taken a small apartment in Washington in case they want to spend the night in town.

Comings and Goings: Mrs. Prescott Huidekoper, of Long Branch, Clarke County, Va., has returned to her home after a visit to New York and Old Westbury, Long Island, with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Cornelius Rathbone.

Before going on to their cottage near Clearwater, Fla., for the winter months, Mr. and Mrs. H. Gwynne Tayloe will visit their daughter-in-law, Mrs. H. Gwynne Tayloe, jr., and their little granddaughter, Polly Ann Tayloe, in Lake City, Fla. They left their home, Windover, near Middleburg, early this week.

At Exning, near Middleburg, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas U. Dudley have as their guest Miss Polly Walker, of Richmond. Miss Margaret Byrd has returned to her home in Winchester after visiting Miss Eleanor Flood in Washington for several days.

Motor Corps Meet: Nine chapters of the Motor Corps were in Warrenton this week to attend the luncheon given by the Fauquier County Motor Corps and to hear Mrs. Trubee Davison, new national director, speak. Mrs. Grace Hendricks Eustis also spoke on the program. Seventy-two ladies attended and enjoyed the delicious luncheon served later by the Fauquier County Canteen in the parish house. Afterward many questions were exchanged and everyone had a most instructive afternoon. Among the captains of Motor Corps Chapters there with their girls were Mrs. A. W. Massey, of Loudoun County; Miss Agnes Mitchell, of Clarke County; Miss White, of Albemarle County; Mrs. H. L. Simcoe, of Arlington County; Mrs. Charles Dillon, of Alexandria; Miss Boyd, of Winchester; Mrs. Wensinger, of Quantico Marines; Mrs. Bowman, of Culpeper County, and Mrs. Howrey, of Fairfax County. Miss Dorothy Neyhart is captain of Fauquier County Chapter, and Mrs. Henri de Heller, lieutenant.

Recently Married William P. Cobbs Living in Fairfax

Mr. and Mrs. William Peyton Cobb, whose marriage took place recently, are now making their home at Three Brooks Farm in Fairfax County, Va. The bridegroom is the son of the late Judge James E. Cobb who, for many years was a member of Congress from Alabama. Before coming to Washington to be with the Department of Justice, Mr. Cobb practiced law in Tuskegee and Montgomery, Ala. He was formerly attorney general of Alabama and also served a term as secretary of state of Alabama.

Although announcement of the wedding is just now being made, the ceremony took place November 15.

She is a descendant of Cornelis Jansen Berrien, who came to New York from Holland in 1669 and of John Macpherson Berrien, Attorney General in President Andrew Jackson's Cabinet. On her mother's side she is descended from William Curtis, who came to this country in 1632 and settled in Roxbury, Mass.

Dr. Fox, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fox, of Foxden, Peekskill, N. Y., was graduated from Harvard College and the Johns Hopkins Medical School. He is a member of the senior staff of Johns Hopkins Hospital now.

Legal Board Examines 16 to 20 Attorneys a Week

The Board of Legal Examiners is an operating concern. It is being financed by Civil Service Commission funds after the House Appropriations Committee refused to recommend a direct appropriation for the board. Solicitor General Charles Fahy has been appointed acting board chairman. He succeeds Attorney General Francis Biddle. Incidentally, Biddle's resignation takes a Harvard-trained man from the board. This step should lessen the fear that the board is "Harvard-dominated." Fahy is a graduate of Georgetown Law School.

The board is giving oral exams to from 16 to 20 attorneys each week. Sixty have been examined to date and 20 per cent have flunked out. Oral tests are given by at least one board member and the other members of the three-man panel are made up of general counsels or their assistants. The questions appear to be exceedingly fair. Applicants are grilled on the subject on which they have specialized.

Before you can be examined, you must get a general counsel to nominate you to the board. Defense agencies such as OPM, OEM and OPA have authority to hire their own attorneys without prior approval of the board for the time being. However, all the attorneys hired by these agencies must be given oral exams later on. The above selection methods are merely "stop-gaps." Both will be discarded shortly when the board gives a competitive exam in January or February. At that time, all new Federal attorneys must be hired from the register of eligibles established by the board. All in all, the board appears to be operating much better than had been expected.

Representative Randolph is trying to get Social Security to move its regional office here to Martinsburg, W. Va. Chairman Altmeyer has promised to investigate the possibility . . . New FCC Commissioner Durr has made Walter E. James his secretary . . . The 28 States that haven't their full quota of Civil Service jobs here are going to get first chance for defense jobs. Civil Service is planning an exhaustive drive in the under-quota States for stenographers and other clerical help for OPM and OEM vacancies.

REA, faced with a drastic personnel slash until it gets copper to string electric wires, is planning to lend its personnel to defense agencies rather than cut them off completely. F. D. R. is reported to have elaborate post-war plans for REA and its personnel will be kept intact. Hence the lending arrangement. Incidentally, it's now predicted at OPM that REA will be given some copper . . . Civil Service Exams: Explosives Chemist, $2600 to $5600; Physicist, $2600 to $5600; Chemical Engineer, $2600 to $5600; Radio Monitoring Officer, $2600 to $3200; Traffic Control Examiner, $3500, and Senior Floriculturist, Olericulturist, and Pathologist, $4600.

Now that decentralization of Federal agencies here is warming up again, both the Budget Bureau and the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, which are investigating decentralization possibilities, should read the testimony of Solon J. Buck, the Archivist. In 1935, Buck said, a preliminary survey showed there were 6500 rooms here and 3,000,000 cubic feet of office space filled with records. He now estimates that there are 5,000,000 cubic feet filled with records and no one, he testified, knows how many rooms are occupied. At least 10,000 employes could be put into the space if the records were either micro-filmed or destroyed.

About 100 Federal employes in one of Washington's larger rooming houses are planning a strike against the rent which they say has been recently raised as much as 85 per cent through the device of crowding more people into the rooms. The employes have a case against their R Street rooming house prepared for submission to the new District rent commissioner . . . Army camps are looking for assistant pharmacists to fix prescriptions for the draftees. If you're interested apply for the Civil Service exam for technical and scientific aid . . . Public Roads Administration already has given its employes pay rises under the Ramspeck-Mead automatic promotion act. All other agencies are following the advice of the House Appropriations Committee and are waiting until the money is actually available.

Capital Now 2d in U. S. Air Traffic

Surpasses Chicago, Runs Next to N. Y.; Transports Leave At Rate of 100 Daily

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Washington is America's tenth city in population, but from the standpoint of air traffic it has forged ahead to a surprising No. 2 position.

Transport planes are now taking off from the Washington National Airport at the rate of 100 a day, and the rate would be greater than that were it not for the defense program and the shortage of airliners.

The fifteen-thousandth take-off from the airport since June 16, when the airport opened, was recorded the other day by Airport Manager John Groves. Up to November 30, a total of 297,752 passengers enplaned or deplaned here. That would not include those who were just passing through.

Second to New York

Manager Groves said that Washington had passed Chicago as an air center and that the National Airport now enjoyed a traffic second only to that at LaGuardia Field in New York.

Long before the $12,500,000 dream airport here was opened last summer, Johnny Groves predicted that it would be a magnet for visitors—nonflying visitors who merely wanted to see the planes come and go. Those who planned the airport foresaw the same thing, and they provided for the spectators by adding observation terraces and by laying out parking facilities for 5000 cars.

Manager Groves said yesterday that in five and a half months the number of visitors at the airport has reached the astonishing total of two and a half million. Of these, 400,000 have paid a dime to go through the turnstiles leading to the observation terrace.

The $40,000 thus taken in at the turnstiles is one good reason why the Washington National Airport started off as a money-maker. This income is in addition to revenues from the air lines, and from the firms that have various concessions—gasoline, dining room, and so on.

Manager Groves would make no predictions, but others have estimated that the net profit in the first year of operation ought to be between $100,000 and $150,000.

Groves, once a star football player at the University of Maryland, envisions the big field at Gravelly Point handling an ever-increasing amount of air traffic. The day is not far off, he believes, when transatlantic planes will be landing there.

Gloom Dispelled

Nothing has happened so far to justify the gloomy predictions that were made when Gravelly Point was being considered as an airport site. One prediction was that fog would seriously impede operations there. Manager Groves said yesterday, however, that operations have had to be suspended only three or four times because of weather conditions.

Actually, he said, the weather record here has been much better than it has been in other big terminal points. Because of conditions at Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Chicago recently, he said, 35 Douglas transports had to be held at the Washington National Airport all of one night.

Since there are only 360 transport planes in operation in the United States, Groves and his associates beheld the spectacle of nearly 10 per cent of all these massed at the local airport.

Chilean Papers Invite Seven U. S. Guest Reporters

Secretary of State Hull announced yesterday that seven Chilean newspapers whose representatives recently worked as guest reporters for seven American newspapers, have reciprocated the invitation.

Asked to send representatives to Chile were The Washington Post, Washington Evening Star, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, New York Times, Boston Globe, Detroit News and Los Angeles Times.

The delegation is scheduled to sail for Valparaiso December 19. The interchange of journalists was initiated by Claude G. Bowers, American Ambassador to Chile.

'Jimmie' Drives Hard Bargain

BEATS COMMISSIONERS AT THEIR OWN GAME—At one point yesterday in the inspection tour of playground sites in the Southwest section, the city fathers encountered 4-year-old "Jimmie Forest," who, for a 10-cent piece from Commissioner Mason, admitted he lived "around the corner" and would like to have a place to spend his "spare time" in safety. He posed for a picture with Mason (left). But not this one. Oh, no! It took another "bribe"—this time 5 cents—to get him to pose like this with Commissioners Kutz (center) and Young (right). With the dime, "Jimmie"—he was sure of that name, too—said he would buy an ice cream cone. With the nickle, he said he would buy another cone" for my mama"

The Commissioners yesterday took an unprecedented personal interest in the welfare of youngsters in some ten scattered communities and spent an hour visiting existing and possible playground sites with announced intentions of wide im-

With them they took Budget Officer Walter Fowler and a cost sheet estimating that $318,100 was needed for "imperative" play space development.

First spot visited was a barren, brick-strewn expansion of District-owned land in front of the Jefferson Junior High School, Eighth and H Streets Southwest.

For some 14 months, the unsightly area, stretching a block on both sides of Eighth Street, has been nothing but a community dump heap, it has been wnown, ironically enough, as the "Southwest Recreation Center;" the butt of frequent civic attacks.

Bought Tract Only Recently

Fowler explained that the District only recently obtained title to the tract, but now was in a position to do something toward is development as a much-needed playground.

So determined was Commissioner John Russell Young to clear the site and open it for play purposes that he commented:

"We'll get this cleaned off and ready for the kids if we have to pick up the bricks ourselves."

Fowler reported that all necessary improvements, grading, landscaping, equipment, etc., would cost approximately $51,200. Some special fund—possibly a deficiency appropriation—is under consideration by the city heads.

Immediate steps, however, are to be taken to open the area for neighborhood children, the Commissioners declared. They said they were not particularly interested in the finishing touches—they just want it cleaned up and made available.

May Get WPA Help

Commissioner Guy Mason indicated that some local contractor might agree to grade the ground in exchange for the extra dirt. He hinted that some "deal" of this type was under way.

It also was suggested that WPA help might be enlisted and with a temporary transfer of workmen from a few other municipal projects, the entire job of renovating the lot might be completed in two or three weeks.

The ground was acquired by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission about two years ago. Shortly after, houses on the site were torn down. Since then, it has remained dormant, collecting beer cans, whisky bottles and offering neighborhood children an invitation to disaster.

The Commissioners also visited a number of other recreation spots where improvements have been requested. They lamented the fact that the city has been unable to keep up both with new land acquisitions and improvements to existing grounds.

"Imperative" improvements and developments have been recommended also for the following centers, already operating:

In addition to the Southwest Center, the Commissioners yesterday visited Randall, Virginia Avenue and Garfield (the latter not mentioned on the improvement list.)

Ice Cream Store Clerk Held Up Twice in 3 Weeks

For the second time in three weeks, Miss Evelyn Ryan was held up last night in High Ice Cream Store, 2014 P Street Northwest, where she is a clerk. This time the man who flashed a nickel-plated revolver got $7 and two dozen eggs. On the other occasion he took $15—and some vanilla ice cream.

Roomer Found Dead In Gas-Filled Room

James T. Culleton, 65, of 736 Third Street Northwest, was found dead in his bedroom yesterday by the landlady, Susie Gammell, who was aroused by the odor of gas. A gas jet was found turned on.

Deputy Coroner Christopher Murphy said he would investigate the circumstances surrounding the death today. Culleton is believed to be a retired member of the Marine Corps.

Reward Is Offered, 'No Questions Asked'

Capt. G. H. Garrison, here on leave from Camp Bowie, Tex., last night offered a reward, "and no questions asked," for the return of a small metal box containing important papers which he said were stolen from his automobile Tuesday. He said the papers were of no use to anyone but himself.

Capt. Garrison is staying with relatives at 317 Tenth Street Northwest, Apartment 42. His home is Zalfo Springs, Fla.

Dr. Ruhland Seeks Power In Housing

Would Placard Rooming Houses Deemed Not Fit For Habitation

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Health Officer George C. Ruhland, who was advised by the House District Committee last week to "get rough" in his effort to push sanitation reforms in Washington, knows what he would like to do about some of the District's rooming houses.

He would like to slap placards on them saying they are not habitable until suggested renovations are made, he declared yesterday.

"But I do not have the authority to do it, and must have some more inspectors. I want to regain the power once belonging to the Department of Health to say whether a place is habitable," he said, "and a revision of sanitary regulations so we can deal with food services in boarding houses."

Dr. Ruhland and various housing and health officials conferred yesterday on revisions needed in District code and sanitary regulations "to give us a more effective hold on the rooming situation here."

Their suggestions will be aired on Capitol Hill at an early date when the House District Committee continues its inquiry into restaurant food inspection regulations. It is expected that a request for "at least twice the present number" of sanitary inspectors will be made.

The present number is 22, with work divided as follows: 11 men on general inspection duty, with 1 to each of the city's 11 sanitary inspection districts; 4 on housing inspection, 1 on mattress inspection, 3 on rodent control, 1 on day nurseries and foster homes for children, 2 on special call.

In the meantime, Washington's defense housing registry—through which volunteer inspectors have been endeavoring to find creditable rooms for newcomers crowding into the city—faces "serious curtailment" of activities because WPA workers are being withdrawn.

William H. Press, secretary of the District Defense Council's subcommittee on housing, yesterday issued a statement declaring the Wednesday decision to cut the WPA workers on the project by one-third might result in "closing up or operating on a half-day basis."

Only five WPA workers will be available for placement at the registry at any time under the new order, Lawrence E. Williams, chairman of the subcommittee, said announcing a meeting of his committee for 3 p.m. next Monday for a discussion of next steps.

Speedy Congress Action Is Urged On Recreation

Speedy action by Congress to establish a nine-member recreation board for Washington was urged yesterday by the D. C. Defense and Recreation Committee.

Hugo Wolter, of the District Defense Council, told a meeting at the Y. W. C. A. that increasing recreation needs brought about by the defense program found Washington agencies "inadequate and unable" to cope with the situation.

At another meeting yesterday a committee of ten was laying extensive plans for Christmas entertainment for soldiers on December 20 at the Y. W. C. A. Helping with the program will be five service men, Hank Yeske, Bolling Field; Vernon Brisson, Navy; Alfred Bourgault, Quantico; Herbert Garfield, Fort Belvoir; Stanley Reichenback, Army Medical Center. Ginger King is chairman of hostesses, with Lorraine Campion, Violet Leffel, Gerry Jones and Betty Brooks as her assistants.

Priority Asked For Bradbury School Project

The Bradbury Heights Citizens Association asked in a resolution last night that priority be given for materials toward completion of Bradbury Heights High School and the new junior high school in Anacostia. The association said that because of the defense program, construction of the buildings has lagged.

The association also asked that two additional fire alarm boxes be installed in Bradbury Heights, adding that there are only three now in the area. At the same time, it urged that Forty-sixth Street between Riggs Terrace and Hillside Road Southeast be graded and put in first-class condition.

Washington Highlands

After delegates to the Public Utilities Forum Wednesday reported that the P. U. C. was considering extending the District's system of express buses, the Washington Highlands Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution requesting the P. U. C. to authorize express bus service from the business district to the Bellevue and Congress Heights areas.

The group also asked that the Stephen Kramer High School be completed in time for the September, 1942 semester, and that funds be appropriated for an elementary school in the vicinity of Nichols and Atlantic Streets Southwest.

Scott Heads Emergency District Police

John E. Scott

A World War hero who recently completed civilian defense courses at the Edgewood Arsenal, Scott will direct the training of an expected force of 1512 men and women for emergency police work in the event of war.

More than 2000 Washingtonians have volunteered for civilian police work and some 1200 of them have already been certified for service. Training of those selected will begin as soon as rigid physical examinations are completed. These tests will begin next week, it was said.

Mead Attacks Barring of Service Men

Men in Uniform Should Be Welcome Anywhere, He Says; D. C. Bills Reported

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, told the Senate yesterday in a brief discussion of the country's morale that he had been told "there are some places here in the District where men wearing the uniform of their country are not welcome."

Stating he had been informed that some public places, such as restaurants and hotels, would not admit men in uniform, he declared:

"If that is true, it will be difficult for us to approach the question of morale or of national unity by beginning at the camp site when we ought to be beginning here in our own community."

The Senate yesterday received the report of its District Committee, recommending the appropriation of $20,000 for an investigation of the Federal Government's participation and responsibilities in the District's water supply system.

Favorable reports on seven other local measures were submitted by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, on behalf of the District Committee.

Bills reported favorably included those which would set up aviation ground-school education in District high schools; authorize food inspectors to destroy impure food; create the office of deputy clerk in the District Court; increase powers of the Board of Public Welfare; increase the penalty for smuggling contraband goods into District penal institutions; place employes of the Board of Public Welfare under the civil service merit system; permit the District government to accept money from the 150-million-dollar Lanham Act fund for the construction of public improvements necessitated by the national emergency.

On behalf of Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee, who is absent from the city, Senator Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware, presented two bills identical to measures already introduced in the House.

One would require the licensing of all charitable organizations in the District and would require them to submit an annual report to the Commissioners. The other would prohibit parking on public or private property without the consent of the owner.

Reds Purchase Rollie Hemsley From Indians

Giants Get Hank Leiber For Bowman

Hemsley Deal Straight Cash; May Indicate 'Cleaning House' in Indians' New Deal

By the Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 4.—The Cincinnati Reds helped themselves and Young Lou Boudreau, of the Cleveland Indians, in one swoop today by taking Catcher Rollie Hemsley out of the American League.

This deal and another by which the New York Giants obtained Outfielder Hank Leiber for Pitcher Bob Bowman and cash came within half a dozen hours of each other and climaxed, if not closed, the major league trading at the minor league meetings.

Some of the big league delegations departed empty handed today and left the convention to draw to a weary close tomorrow with its accomplishments restricted chiefly to the reorganization of the Giants, some secondary trades and a surprise legislative coup by the chain-store systems which sought more freedom in handling of players in the minors.

Straight Cash Deal

The Hemsley deal was most intriguing of the developments, partly because of its implications that the new deal in Cleveland might be cleaning house. It was a straight cash transaction and the money involved was no great sum, although both clubs felt they had benefited.

The little 34-year-old backstop has been a prominent figure in the major leagues for a dozen years, playing in one world series for the National League and a couple of all-star games for the American League.

During his long career he spent part of the 1933 season at Cincinnati and batted .190. In those days Hemsley was a hard man to handle and though he ultimately settled down to business, limited his beverages to milk and water, and developed into a good-hitting, efficient catcher, he still represented a big problem to the 24-year-old youngster who will direct the Indians next year.

Hemsley is a veteran who was playing in the big time when the new Cleveland manager wasn't old enough to be a Boy Scout and he was one of the players who joined in the rebellion against Manager Oscar Vitt. With Gene Desautels on hand and a fine young prospect named Otto Denning coming up, the deal that sent Hemsley away seemed to improve the prospects for peace and comfort at Cleveland.

Hit Only .240 Last Year

Manager Bill McKechnie, of the Reds, was glad to get him because Cincinnati desperately needed a catcher capable of playing regularly for the next year or two and Hemsley will fill this order adequately—even though he hit only .240 in 98 games last season.

The Leiber-Bowman swap seemed a standoff with either or both as likely to be stars next season instead of the busts they were last.

This deal was completed after hours of squabbling over a matter of $5000 differential in the amount of cash the Giants were willing to give and the sum the Cubs demanded.

Leiber, for the second time in his career, was hit on the head by a pitched ball last spring and played in only 53 games, batted .216 although rated a .300 hitter. Bowman, for whom the Giants paid $25,000 to the St. Louis Cardinals at the winter meetings a year ago, won only six games and lost seven.

There were many other trade talks during the day to no avail, and the Chicago White Sox, Brooklyn Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds delegations as well as Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics, left town.

Penn's Harry Odell On Father-Son Banquet Program

Harry Odell, backfield coach at University of Pennsylvania, will be the guest speaker at the father and son banquet at Sidwell Friends School tonight, beginning at 6:30.

Odell will show movies of some of Penn's games during the past season and may have with him one of the backfield stars.

Justice William O. Douglas will be among the prominent fathers scheduled to attend.

Grimes to Pilot Toronto Club

Leman also announced that Toronto had reached a working agreement with the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National League.

Coach Stevens' Ouster at NYU Is Demanded

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 4.—The New York University football stew that's been cooking while the Violets were getting their ears knocked off all season came to boil today with a demand from former N. Y. U. athletes for the ouster of Coach Mal Stevens and Athletic Board chairman Philip Badger.

The executive committee of the Letter Club, made up of men who have won letters since 1875, charged that the university hasn't been consistent with its avowed de-emphasis policy, and that the matter should be ironed out, even if it means once-mighty N. Y. U. gives up the game altogether.

Several days ago, the committeemen contended that the Violet material has been as good as "most of the other football teams" in the country, that the policy "does not de-emphasize football, but emphasizes it" in the matter of schedules and coaching salaries, and that the coaching has been subpar.

Deficit Mounted

Today they disclosed that the university's athletci deficit has mounted from $98,000 to more than $130,000 in the past two years, that football receipts have dwindled from $805,000 per season under Chick Meehan to $97,000 last year, and that some N. Y. U. players now get tuition amounting to $350 and room and board "which probably figures to $150" annually.

The committee leveled its biggest guns at Prof. Badger, who also is president of the National Collegiate A. A. The committeemen recalled that after Meehan left the school in 1931, Prof. Badger told the Letter Club, "Football at N. Y. U. will be deodorized not deemphasized."

"Yet," the committee stated, "in 1934 the university hired a coaching staff which was the highest paid in the school's history. In fact, this staff has cost as much as $27,000 per year under Stevens. We dropped Colgate and Georgia in 1934, yet we've played them both since, and in the past ten years we've had such ranking rivals as Ohio State, Purdue, North Carolina, Missouri, Holy Cross, Tulane, Fordham and Texas A. & M.

At the university, it was learned that Tulane, Missouri, Syracuse and Fordham are among teams slated for next year's schedule, but that there's a possibility Tulane may be dropped because of the Southern school's insistence that the tussle be shifted to New Orleans.

Stevens, the former Yale coach who came to N. Y. U. in 1934, is serving out his second five-year contract right now—but it doesn't run out until 1946.

Post Presents All-Americas IV and V

Collier's and Dooley's All-American Versions

Virginia's Dudley Placed on Collier's Mythical Eleven

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 4.—Frank Albert, Stanford quarterback, and Bob Reinhard, University of California tackle, are the only repeaters on Collier's Magazine's All-America football team for 1941, which was announced tonight.

With Albert in the backfield are Bruce Smith, of Minnesota, and high-scoring Bill Dudley, of Virginia, the halfbacks, and Bob Westfall, of Michigan, fullback.

Chosen at end are John Rokisky, of unbeaten and untied Duquesne, and Malcolm Kutner, of University of Texas. Ernie Blandin, of Tulane, is Reinhard's running mate at tackle; Endicott (Chub) Peabody, of Harvard, and Bernie Crimmons, of Notre Dame, a converted fullback, are the guards, and Vincent J. Banonis of Detroit, is the choice for center.

Georgia's V. Davis, Bruce Smith, Albert Are Standouts

By Eddie Dooley

Famous Football Expert

With all-America football teams as numerous this year as the victory emblems which are being flashed and splashed all over the country, this writer hesitates to join the parade and pick one. Obviously an all-America team is worth no more than the opinion of the man or men selecting it. Like death and taxes, all-America teams are always with us. They are necessary evils which have become part and parcel of the annual gridiron campaign.

No football authority has ever yet picked an all-America eleven without prefacing his selections with an apology. The reason is, in singling out eleven men from the field, a serious injustice is done to others who may be equally deserving. No man can see more than a dozen college games in a single season, consequently it is impossible to cover the entire field. All any one can hope to get is a worm's eye view of the whirling football firmament.

MY ALL-AMERICA TEAM FOR 1941

GUARDS—Peabody, of Harvard, and Frankowski, of Washington.

CENTER—Gude, of Vanderbilt.

FULLBACK—Filipowicz, of Fordham.

Here is a team that packs both heft and mobility, terrific destructive power and unusual defensive strength. Every man on it is expert in his own field. V. Davis and Kutner are a pair of wingmen whose flanks have seldom been turned. Both are big, rugged, aggressive and enduring.

Reinhard Stands Out

At the tackles, Reinhard, of the Golden Bears, stood out nobly on a team that was badly kicked around, and which lost more games than it won. It was his superb play and leonine charge that ruined Stanford's far-famed T formation offense and enabled the Bears to beat the Palo Altoans.

Wildung, the Gopher ace, was a story-book player all fall. When Minnesota needed a gain badly, its pilot sent the play roaring through Wildung's spot on the line. In a circuit that is known for its great forwards—the Western Conference—he dominated the field.

Guards don't come any better than Peabody, of Harvard, a blue-blooded powerhouse, who, on the football field at least, was a throwback to some bruising Corsair ancestor.

Frankowski, the Hoosier whose blocky, stocky form reminded you of a steel puddler, has been the biggest factor in line play in the northwestern part of the country for two or three years. Against such formaidable teams as Minnesota, Oregon State and Stanford, his play made him outstanding, and he won the unbounded respect of his adversaries.

There were some very able centers this fall, like Banonis, of Detroit; Jenkins, of Missouri; Demeo, of Duquesne, but to my mind the ablest of all was Gude, of Vanderbilt. It was his incredible play that inspired his teammates to their most coveted victories. He was the spearhead of as gallant a line as took the field anywhere.

As for the backs—if there is a better quarterback than the veteran Albert, of Stanford, he has not been heard from. The Palo Alto pilot is regarded by conservative Clark Shaughnessy as a second coach on the field of play.

Every all-America team in the country has Bruce Smith on its roster, and properly so. He was the man who gave the Minnesota team the victory touch in the dark moments when it looked as though Bierman's impressive march of conquest was about to be interrupted.

Like Moser, of Texas, Smith was versatile enough to be a powerful threat every time he faked or took the ball. And he had the instinct which distinguishes the all-America player from the near great.

At fullback, Filipowicz, truly one of the greatest backs of the year, gets the call over Westall, of Michigan, and Griggs, of Holy Cross, because of his defensive play and long-range passing skill.

Tulsa Takes Sun Bowl Bid; Foe Unknown

By the Associated Press

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 4.—Tulsa University has accepted an invitation to send its Golden Hurricane football team to the Sun Bowl New Year's Day, the Sun Bowl committee reported tonight.

Tulsa's opponent, representing the Border Conference, is expected to be either Arizona University or Texas Tech.

Tulsa, of the Missouri Valley Conference, won seven of its nine games this season.

The Border Conference representative will be selected Saturday night. There were strong indications the Red Raiders of Texas Tech would get the bid.

Tech, a member of the conference but ineligible for its title, was beaten only by Miami (Fla.) University. The Lubbock eleven failed to play the required three conference games during the season to qualify for the title.

Arizona University, unbeaten in the conference, has hinted it might not accept an offer because of a long-standing policy against post-season games.

The Sun Bowl committee had sent feelers to unbeaten and untied Duquesne University of Pittsburgh, among other Eastern elevens.

Al Blozis Given Spot On All-Eastern Eleven

Chewning, Busik, of Navy, Gain Places; Harvard's Peabody, MacKinney Are Named

By Herb Barker

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 4.—Navy and Harvard each place two men on the 1941 All-Eastern football team compiled today by the Associated Press.

Drawn from the powerful Navy array which lost only to Notre Dame are Bill Chewning, big tackle, and Bill Busik, triple-threat back who sparked the Tars' offense. Harvard's representatives are Endicott Peabody 2d, guard, and Loren MacKinney, end and kicking specialist.

Selected with Busik for backfield duty are Andy Tomasic, Temple veteran; Gene Davis, brainy quarterback of the University of Pennsylvania, and Steve Filipowicz, Fordham's accomplished fullback.

Chewning's tackle mate is big Al Blozis, of Georgetown, national shot-put champion and a tough man on the gridiron. Peabody's running mate at the other guard post is Ralph Fife, of Pittsburgh, while John Rokisky, of undefeated Duquesne, is chosen for the remaining end post. The center position goes to Ed Korisky, 190-pounder from Villanova.

Blozis' 246 pounds and Chewning's 220 bring the line average up to better than 202 pounds. The backfield averages 186.

Fine judgment by Davis was a major factor in guiding Penn's well-balanced team to the Ivy League championship, while Busik was perhaps the most valuable cog in the Navy machine.

Many Good Backs

There was spirited competition for the backfield positions from such star ball-carriers of Edgar Jones of Pittsburgh, Hank Mazur of Army, Paul Governali of Columbia, Len Krouse of Penn State, Jim Blumenstock of Fordham, Howie Clark of Navy, Bill Geyer of Colgate, John Grigas of Holy Cross, Bert Stiff of Penn, Joe Martin of Cornell, to name only a few.

The end posts winners were hard-pressed by such rivals as Jim Lansing of Fordham, Bernie Kuczynski of Penn, Alan Bartholemy of Yale, and Bob Zoeller and Lars Wanggard of Navy.

Peabody and Fife were standouts at guard and drew high praise from the coaches of rival teams. They take the two all-star positions without much, if any, argument.

Chief competition for Chewning and Blozis at tackle came from Gene Flathmann of Navy, Hank Zajkowski of Temple, the Fordham pair of Alex Santilli and Steve Hudacek, the Columbia pair of Herb Mack and Ray Makofske, as well as Vern Miller, Harvard's 300-pounder, Paul Stenn of Villanova, and Walter Moeling of Penn.

Battling Korisky for the center post were Al Demao of Duquesne, Bob Evans of Army, Ken Beehner of Syracuse and Fred Naumets of Boston College.

Beaver Dam Club Under New Lessees

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Professional Al Houghton, his assistant, Walter Bogley, jr., and associates last night signed an 11-year lease to take over Beaver Dam Country Club and immediately changed the name to the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club. The lease includes an option to buy.

Houghton, who will be president of the new club in addition to full-time golf professional, did not divulge the names of the backers but said they would be disclosed in the near future. Bogley will be secretary-treasurer.

Edward G. Brashears, Washington attorney, was the principal stockholder of Beaver Dam, Inc., and with Club President George D. Sullivan signed over the 20-year-old layout to the new lessees, to be known as Houghton, Bogley and Associates. S. G. Leoffler, sr., lessee of the District Public Links courses, was a member of the board of governors.

Houghton announced the club would retain its private status and that the entire membership of approximately 250 would be retained. A membership drive which will get underway in January is expected to double the present membership to a maximum of 500 resident members. here will be no increase in dues or initiation fee.

27-Hole Layout

The Beaver Dam Club was opened 20 years ago on a 206-acre plot in Landover, Md., and later was increased to 27 holes. The original clubhouse was destroyed by fire in 1932 and a modern brick clubhouse, one of the largest in this section, replaced it.

The management decided the extra nine holes was too heavy a burden several years ago when the future of the club was in doubt and it has not been kept up.

A restoration of the new 9 holes, a swimming pool and additional tennis courts are among the plans of the new lessees, in addition to minor improvements to the clubhouse and the present 18 holes.

A board of governors will control the inner operations of the club, according to Houghton, much in the manner of the Donal Cham-

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Rookie Manager Lou Boudreau, of the Cleveland Indians, who is a very bright lad, is letting no rebellion grow under his feet. In the first week of his new job he has traded Catcher Rollie Hemsley, fired Coach Earl Whitehill and hired Oscar Melillo as a coach. With speedy forthrightness, Boudreau is nipping any semblance of discontent.

Hemsley and Whitehill could be a pair with frustrated ambitions for the job that went to Boudreau. In fact, it is known that Hemsley was a disappointed candidate after Oscar Vitt was fired as manager and the post went to Roger Peckinpaugh. Whitehill never voiced any managerial ambitions, but in most other matters he is outspoken, and Boudreau apparently wants to chance no internal strife.

The hiring of Mellilo fits easily into the milk-and-honey picture of the new regime at Cleveland. During all of the mess of the Vitt regime at Cleveland, Mellilo was a beacon of purity in the bickering between Vitt and the players. As Vitt's coach, he held himself aloof from all cliques, as did Boudreau, and though he emerged without a job he was untained. "I guess I'm an old-fashioned baseball man," Mellilo once told this department after Vitt was fired. "I was brought up in baseball to believe that the manager was the boss of the team and to take orders as he gave 'em." Small wonder, then, that Boudreau would like to have Mellilo around as a coach.

There may be relation in the fact that Hemsley, still a pretty good catcher, was traded to the Cincinnati Reds for cash, after it was ascertained that Bob Feller could not escape Army duty next season. Hemsley has been Feller's pet catcher, in fact Feller credits Hemsley with his control and curve ball. But with Feller lost to the Indians, Hemsley has lost his angel. Feller always did have a way of winning his point with all Cleveland managers. They had to listen to a pitcher of his stature and most of the time, anyway, Cleveland managers were preening themselves in Feller's reflected glory.

But the evidence is that Boudreau was determined to get rid of Hemsley in a hurry. The fact that the catcher was sold to the Reds for cash seems to indicate Boudreau's stand in the matter. In these days, players of Hemsley's ability are not sold unless playing talent is received in exchange, but it didn't take Boudreau long to unload Hemsley for a cash offer.

There isn't much doubt that Boudreau preferred to see Hemsley on some other club and that his preference was very emphatic. Because Hemsley, after all had been the Indians' best catcher. He could do everything better than Gene DeSautels, the only other veteran catcher with the Indians, and in a brief trial last year, Rookie Jim Hegan, from Wilkes-Barre, did not exactly delight the Cleveland bosses with his work.

Hemsley has been a remarkable fellow for the reconstruction job he did on himself. Fined and suspended a dozen times for overdrinking and his escapades that followed, Hemsley two years ago took the pledge and has been a model of sobriety. He credits Alcoholic Anonymous, the temperate society, with his reform, and has been an active worker for that group.

Even when he was reeking of his sessions the night before, Hemsley was one of baseball's better catchers. Sammy West last season flung this tribute at Hemsley: "I've seen him catching for the St. Louis Browns when he could have used sleep and rest, and even on those days he was a better catcher than anybody in the league except Bill Dickey."

It is something less than startling to learn that Manager Bucky Harris is talking trade with Manager Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, and that Outfielder Doc Cramer has been mentioned as a tradee. Harris is in a mood to accept Center Fielder Mike Kreevich in return.

Cramer was a huge favorite with Washington fans last season after being acquired from the Red Sox, but the Nats' bosses were not highly pleased with the veteran. Harris did not rate Cramer as one of the better center fielders of the league despite his fancy catches that endeared him to Washington fans.

Throughout the season, Harris was beefing at Cramer's play in the outfield. He acknowledged the great skill of Cramer's throwing arm, and his brilliant playing on long-hit balls, but Harris writhed continually at the hits that were dropping in front of Cramer. He played too deep to catch the line drives to center field that outfielders on other clubs were hauling in, and for every fancy catch that Cramer made in deep center, Harris could point to a hit to short center he didn't get.

Kreevich has been in a batting slump with the White Sox for two years after being a consistent .300 hitter, but if the Chicago club wants Cramer in an even swap, Harris would probably leap at the trade. Kreevich is the sort of a defensive center fielder Cramer used to be.

111 Horses Nominated For Santa Anita 'Cap

Whirlaway Heads Record Number Named For Annual $100,000 Racing Classic

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Dec. 4.—Like Abou ben Adhem, the name of Whirlaway led all the rest today as a record number of nominations was announced for the richest horse race in the world—the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

A brilliant field of 111 candidates—and there might be a few more in mail yet to reach Santa Anita—was nominated for the eighth running of the mile and one quarter winter time classic on March 7.

Rated behind Warren Wright's triple-crown winner Whirlaway was a fancy array of stake contenders for what might be the finest field to go postward in the annual golden gallop.

Included in the field of soon-to-be-four-year-olds were several of Whirly's rivals—Market Wise, Porter's Cap, Staretor, Dispose, Good Turn, Our Boots, Tragic Ending and others.

Mioland Entered

In the older division were such illustrious campaigners as Charles S. Howard's Mioland, William L. Brann's on-the-comeback-road Challedon, Pictor, Haltal, Boysy and such California favorites as Sweepida Bolingbroke and Specify.

Missing from the list was Tony Pelleteri's Bay View, surprise winner of the 1941 race in a close finish with Mioland. Possible threats from the 1941 two-year-old crop were headed by the standout of the division, Alsab.

Included in the field of foreign-bred candidates was Meissen, the Peruvian importation brought to this country by A. T. Jergins of Long Beach, Calif., last summer.

Previous high number of nominations was in 1939, when 107 were listed. That was the year Howard's Kayak II, now out with injuries, captured the top purse.

Discovery Ran 7th

Whirlaway's domination of the present field is rivaled only by the year Alfred Vanderbilt's great Discovery came West for the classic—and finished seventh to a tough little hero tabbed Top Row.

All important weights for the big Cap will be posted by Racing Secretary Webb Everett December 15. The Santa Anita 55-day meeting, with the largest distribution of

Eagles and Redskins to Test Rookies in Sunday's Game Here

Philadelphia Signs Three New Players

Visitors to Bring Full Squad of 33; Home Attendance Record May Be Set

The Philadelphia Eagles will bring a full squad of 33 players here for the National Pro League final Sunday against the Redskins, quite a contrast to their undermanned squad of 22 which finished the 1941 season at Griffith Stadium early in December.

Last year the Redskins and Dodgers were still battling for the Eastern division title when the Eagles cut the squad to a minimum of 22 players the week before the game in an economy move which drew an official protest from Dodger Owner Dan Topping.

This year, under the backing of Alexis Thompson, the Eagles are in a different position, however, and instead of reducing the squad the Eagle management announced yesterday three rookies had been signed for the final game, bringing the squad to 33, three more than the Redskins.

Fritz Petela and Jack Hinkle, backs, and Hubert Pate, a tackle, all of the New York Yankees, are the rookies.

O'Brien Set Record

The Philadelphians were allowed to complete the season with their 22 players last year and almost had too much for the Redskins at that, as Davey O'Brien set a new passing record of 33 completion and the team only lost by 13-8.

Coach Ray Flaherty has already promised his Redskin rookie players a maximum of competition and with the Eagles' coach, Greasy Neale, contemplating using his three new players, plus other first-year men, Sunday's game is taking on the aspect of "rookie day."

The Eagles have nothing at stake while the Redskins can still share in the runner-up purse with the Brooklyn Dodgers by winning should the Dodgers lose to the Giants. The teams would be tied with six victories and five defeats in that case.

Ed Justice is definitely out for the season and with Dick Todd and Wilbur Moore already homeward bound the Redskins will have 30 players available as they attempt to snap a four-game losing streak.

Attendance Sets High

With a break in the weather the Redskins may surpass their all-time home attendance of 193,442, set last year in winning the Eastern championship. They need 26,565 to establish a new six-game home mark. The largest crowd attended the opening game with the Giants, 35,607, and the smallest saw the Steelers, 30,755. The average attendance has been 33,375.

Indications are that the Eagle game will draw approximately 26,000, or more than last year when the team had not yet clinched the Eastern title.

Several hundred Georgetown University students and alumni will help celebrate Georgetown Day by honoring Jim Castiglia, Joe Frank and Lou Ghecas, of the Eagles; Augie Lio, of the Detroit Lions, and Clem Stralka, of the Redskins, all prominent former Hoyas.

The Redskins continued workouts yesterday with the rookies working against the T formation attack of the Eagles and the passing of Tommy Thompson, second only to Cecil Isbell in percentage of completions.

Ernie Dusek Wins Over Nanjo Singh

Ernie Dusek suddenly went air-minded and came up with a really classic airplane spin which grounded Nanjo Singh and gave the wily Dusek the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night. However, Ernie had a tough 30 minutes before he could take the bout and during that time he weathered two of nasty Nanjo's cobra clutches, plus half dozen bites on the arms, fingers and toes.

Yes, sir; Nanjo not only bit the Dusek digits, but he even took a few unethical nips at Ernie's shoes—and right while Ernie's substantial No. 12's were still in 'em! All of this by-play displeased Ernie as well as the fans, and Referee Casey Berger was called upon to do a bit of policing. This proved a thankless task for Singh ripped Casey's shirt to tatters and took a couple of wild swings at the arbiter. As if this wasn't enough trouble, Dusek took exceptions to some of the referee's decisions and put in his penny's worth of assault.

Twice during the match Singh latched on with his lethal cobra, but in each instance it was ruled a strangle and Dusek was given a new lease on life.

Dependable Pat Fraley and Leo Numa, alias Axel Anderson, the old Rose Bowl gridder, worked to a draw in the semifinal. This match was a surprise to the lads for each of them was pinch-hitting for a missing performer. They were very courteous and gentlemanly throughout for they happen to be old chums. All this sportsmanship was pleasing to the fans even though it produced no gore.

Emil Dusek forced Freddy Grobmier to give up on a leglock after 17 minutes. This was a rousing affair as both boys had been training on raw beef, and it resembled a national convention of the Bad Humor men. The ring was too small for their talents so the audience was frequently treated to a first-hand view of nature in the raw.

Sailor Simms, heavyweight wrestling champ of the United States Navy, made short work of portly Herbie Freeman, dropping that worthy with a flying tackle and body press in 12½ minutes. The Sailor, one of the best physical specimens to ever appear at Hysteria Hall, unlimbered his big guns and Herbie was bleating for mercy.

In the opener, Ace Freeman and Fred Carone drew.

Five Schools Participate In Field Hockey Tourney

Field hockey teams from five local public high schools held their fourth annual playday yesterday at Calvin Coolidge High School. Central, Wilson, Western, Anacostia, and McKinley participated in the tournament which was sponsored by the Washington Field Hockey Association in conjunction with the physical education department of Calvin Coolidge High School.

Instead of pitting school against school in tournament play, the association mixed the players to form eight inter-school elevens to play four games. But the forward lines and the backfields were kept intact, and in most cases the players were shuffled in such a manner that the forward line of a schol would be playing against its own backfield.

Following the games, honorary varsity and reserve teams were chosen by a committee representing the Washington Field Hockey Association. Heading the selection committee, which was composed of Elizabeth Cooper and Mrs. R. M. Beddoe, was Elizabeth Plimpton, goal keeper on the All-Washington field hockey team. The two teams played an exhibition match which ended in a 2-0 victory for the varsity players.

The playday ended with the traditional tea that culminates all field hockey tournaments. Jenny Turnbull, retiring president of the Washington Field Hockey Association, spoke at the tea and congratulated the players on the quality of their play.

The first and second teams and their schools are as follows:

D. C. Women's Golf Body Installs Officers

Mrs. Weible, Mrs. Kramer and Mrs. Letts Inducted for 2d Terms at Annual Meeting

The District Women's Golf Association gave its usual unanimous approval of the nominating committee's selection of officers at the twentieth annual meeting yesterday at Army War College.

Installed for second terms were Mrs. Walter L. Weible, Kenwood, as president, and Mrs. Frank H. Kramer, Manor, and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, Chevy Chase, vice presidents. Elected to first terms were Mrs. Gorham Freer, Washington Golf and Country Club, secretary, and Mrs. E. A. Swingle, Congressional, treasurer.

Among the reports read Mrs. Weible was particularly proud of Mrs. P. J. Winkler's treasurer's report in which every cent of the $1223 income was put back into the association, including $1050 for prizes for the 15 association sponsored tournaments.

Mrs. Helen Hicks Harb who deserted the women's amateur ranks in 1934 after winning virtually every major tournament including the national, was a guest speaker. Mrs. Harb recently took up residence in Washington.

The former Helen Hicks stressed the importance of an accurate handicapping system for a satisfactory tournament season, and that association members were all responsible as it was up to them to turn in their individual cards. Mrs. Harb also told the women golfers to play golf for a good time and make a sport of it instead of too much business. She offered her services to the association for the '42 season.

The luncheon meeting, one of the shortest on record, was concluded by brief reports from some of the 1941 committee chairmen, including Mrs. E. A. Swingle and Mrs. I. C. Peterson, handicaps; Mrs. P. W. Rutledge, tournaments; Mrs. Myron Davy, intercity team; Mrs. Ed Widmayer, prizes; Mrs. W. B. Barkdull, yearbooks, and Mrs. Theodore Peyser, of the nominating committee. Mrs. Freer read both the treasurer and secretary reports of the respective outgoing officers, Mrs. Harvey Cooper, Kenwood, and Mrs. P. J. Winkler, Congressional.

The meeting concluded the affairs of the association and marked one of its most successful years. The income was just $4 short of the biggest year on record, the second term of Mrs. Robert A. Lacey's presidency, and tournament entries exceeded expectations. Mrs. Weible will call an executive committee meeting in mid-January for early committee appointments.

Buffalo Routs Lions, 8 to 1, Before 5481

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 4.—The Buffalo Bisons scored their seventh straight American Hockey League victory tonight before a crowd of 5481, routing the Washington Lions, 8-1.

Buffalo took a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Bill Allum and Klein and roared back with four more in the second, two of which were credited to Morey Rimstad. Max Bennett and Bob Gracie made the others.

Tony Hemmerling and Mickey Drouillard closed the Bisons' goal-getting activities in the final period.

Paul Drouin's goal with less than six minutes to play deprived Goalie Claude Bourque of his second shutout of the season. Bourque played brilliantly agains tthe Lions, who had racked up 16 goals in their previous two games.

The Lions, who were making their first appearance in Buffalo's handsome Memorial Auditorium, let out a loud roar after the Bisons' first goal, which came midway through the first period. Allum let fly from the blue line, and the Lions alleged that the puck had gone into the net off a Buffalo player's arm. Best available opinion was that it had glanced off Lou Trudel's skate. The protest didn't amount to a great deal, however, for 61 seconds later Klein, backhanded home another point, after a three-man rush. Bert Janke was sent off for tripping Klein with 50 seconds left, and drew a 10-minute misconduct when he objected vehemently.

The invaders stood off the herd while Janke was replaced by a substitute, but then the red-hot Bisons struck again. Bill Cunningham went down, evaded Leo Lamoureaux' check and sent a perfect backhand pass to Rimstad, camped at the goal mouth. Max Bennett tacked up the next, outscrambling Paul Gauthier after the undefended goalie had come out in an effort to save. Bob Gracie took Rimstad's cross-rink pass, bore in on Gauthier and feinted him into knots to make it 5-0. The Bisons added still another after the end of the second period, Rimstad converting Cunningham's rebound. It was a long 20 minutes for the Lions.

Detroit Beats Brooklyn Ice Team, 4 to 3

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Dec. 4.—Modere (Mud) Bruneteau's goal in the final minute of play enabled the Detroit Red Wings to win a see-saw National Hockey League battle tonight from the Brooklyn Americans, 4 to 3, before 6,179 fans.

The victory, second over the Americans this season, gave the Red Wings undisputed possession of fifth place.

The free-scoring contest was enlivened by a near flurry of fisticuffs between Referee Bill Chadwick and Manager Mervyn (Red) Dutton, of the Americans, over the alleged failure of the official to call a penalty.

Shortly before the second period ended Pat Egan, Brooklyn defenseman, crashed head first into the boards and Dutton vehemently protested the failure of Referee Chadwick to call a penalty against the Red Wings.

Blackhawks Win

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 4 (AP).—The Chicago Blackhawks set a season's high for scoring tonight when they defeated the Montreal Canadiens, 9-2, before 8103 spectators in the Chicago Stadium.

War Smoke Captures Goose Creek Purse at Charles Town

Buddy Root Boots Home The Winner

Longshot Returns $49.20 Payoff; Bluestring Finishes 2d, Try Flying 3d

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 4.—Mrs. K. H. Elliott's War Smoke, a 3-year-old daughter of Constitution and Firebird, came through on the rail and withstood a long drive to win the Goose Creek Purse, featuring the Thursday program here. The aptly-named filly used the race as a means of winning for the first time in her career and turned back a fair brand of sprinters over the Chales Town course of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs.

Jockey Buddy Root, riding his second winner of the day, drove War Smoke into a neck victory with J. W. Heinicke's Bluestring second and a half length in front of Mrs. A. Bevan's Try Flying. The three money horses were long shots with War Smoke providing a $49.20 return on the win end. The filly was clocked in 1:16 1/5.

Although a fog that canceled workouts here this morning lifted before the program began, the skies were overcast and there was a chill in the air for the first time during racing hours at the meeting. Betting was brisk despite the fact that only 5,000 fans turned out for the sport.

Opens Lead

Try Flying was first to show in front and opened a three-length lead in the opening quarter. The son of Flying Heels saved ground and appeared to be running easily in front of a group that included Butcher Boy, Dainty Ford and Bluestring. In the stretch, Try Flying faded and Bluestring drove up on the outside to take command. War Smoke, however, came through a narrow opening on the rail and put on a burst of speed that Bluestring could not resist.

Jockey Martin Bletzacker started the favorite players off on the right foot by winning the first race by 2 lengths with Brazen Hussy doing the running. The daughter of Hi-Jack and Sun Hussy paid $3.40.

Buddy Root rode his first winner of the day aboard Vernon Arthur's Real Boy in the second race and set the stage for a $122.80 pay-off in the daily double. Real Boy paid $24.40 individually and stepped to the wire a length in advance of Sun Salvator. The veteran rider, Joe Cowley, booted Miss Ksar home in the third race to put the finishing touches on the twin wager. The $11.80 shot crossed the line ahead of Grimaldi and Bob Junior.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Former Jockey Henry Little is one of the happiest men around Charles Town. Gooseberry sported his silks to their first victory on Wednesday program. Weight, the bugaboo of most riders, forced Henry to abandon flat riding and forced him into steeplechasing, a precarious occupation at its best. Then last May 15, Little's jumping career came to an end when the same horse, Gooseberry fell in the running of a hurdle event at Belmont Park. Little was painfully injured and upon recovery had to find another field of endeavor to earn his living. He acquired Gooseberry from the Greentree Stable and yesterday the same chestnut gelding, which terminated his career as a jumping rider paid dividends. Exercise boy Jack Morgan, in the employ of Ed Anthony, was painfully injured during training hours yesterday and was removed to Charles Town Hospital. Starter John Morrissey put the new ultramodern Bahr starting gate into actual use yesterday. Despite a heavy fog this morning, the new device was used during schooling hours and horsemen as well as jockeys were high in praise for all of the new features. Safety for both riders and horses is the keynote of the latest dispatching device. Each of the 10 individual stalls have more padding than a man needs to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel. Many thoroughbreds as well as riders, have suffered head injuries when spirited horses reared up and struck the overhead ironwork, however, a heavy strip of padding has been placed on the top of the gate to eliminate this bad feature.

See you on the rail gates.

BILL.

First race—ROUGH TIME seems an hour the best of the sprinters gathered for this short dash. Needs only to get off the reserve list. HIBLAZE was a bang-up second last out and is a threat. GLORIOUS TIME has speed, gets in light and is dangerous.

Second race—JAMES has raced well on the big tracks and probably is the right one in this rather open race. MAC'S CANTOR is fit and ready for the best. TOWN CAR will be a keen factor.

Third race—SCOOTIE has speed and should make the most of the inside post position. PETE'S PRINCE belongs close with this kind. CAMP SORTIE may be along in time to take part of the money.

Fourth race—SILVER BEAM was a champion around here last summer and should start with a set of brackets in this field. JEANE JOCK is a fair sort and belongs close. NOON STEP likes the oval.

Fifth race—ADOLF ran a fair race first out here and should improve enough to beat these. BUTTERMAN was second opening day and will be a threat. NEVER HOME for the minor award.

Sixth race—WIRE ME has good mile races and promises to turn back this company. TIPHI ran well in New England and belongs close. AGNES KNIGHT for the third money.

Seventh race—ALLEN CAID likes the route and needs only the right handling to defeat these. HOT MAN is good now and will be a keen factor. GOLD SWEEP to take a piece of the pay.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take JOANNY, TWO PLY and DURABLE.

SEC Chairman Hits Bankers' Complaints

By the Associated Press

Hollywood Beach, Fla., Dec. 4.—Edward Eicher, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, today struck sharply at what he called a "bellyaching" attitude of bankers.

In a statement to newsmen, Eicher replied to the criticism which had been made of the SEC in the annual convention of the Investment Bankers Association of America.

"I sympathize with the bankers and I think they are important to our economy," he said. "But they'll never get anywhere by bellyaching."

Eicher said Emmett F. Connely, of Detroit, president of the I. B. A., "is not helping the cause for national unity by preaching a doctrine of despair."

Must Aid Small Investors

Eicher said the machinery of investment banking must be geared down to small investors.

President Connely attended the press conference at which Eicher spoke. He differed with the view that big institutional investors were getting all good security issues.

Instead, he said, about 25 per cent of them fan out to small buyers.

In his speech before the convention Eicher held out an olive branch to the bankers and praised their work with his staff on the proposals to amend the securities laws.

Misunderstandings Cited

Appearing before the I. B. A. as a spokesman for the national administration, Eicher frankly acknowledged serious misunderstandings between the bankers and his commission over how to change acts controlling the SEC.

But, he said, in summer-long conferences, the two rival groups settled many problems by a "mutual determination to eliminate as many" issues as possible.

Concerning the legislation now before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Eicher said:

"At the outset there were countless points of disagreement and the good Lord alone knows how many more points of plain misunderstanding on both sides. And of course there was no small amount of wariness on both sides.

Answer to Attack

"In fact, the chances at that time that we would be able to complete the discussion and consideration of the entire program amicably were probably smaller than any of us remember."

Eicher brought to the I. B. A.'s thirtieth annual convention the Administration answer to sharp comment leveled particularly at the SEC.

R. McClean Stewart, of Harriman Ripley and Co., New York, asserted that the commission had fought at every step attempts of the I. B. A. to convince Congress that the SEC's powers should be restricted.

John S. Fleek, of Hayden, Miller and Co., Cleveland, Ohio, is expected to be elected association president at tomorrow's session. He was nominated by the board of governors.

Cotton Futures

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—Cotton futures advances 25 to 58 cents a bale today to around the highest prices since late October.

The market rose as much as $1 a bale at one time, or almost $5 a bale more than a little over a week ago.

The advance attracted profit-taking and hedging which pared ton marks.

Chicago, Dec. 4 (AP).—Borg-Warner Corporation announced today the purchase of all machinery of the Stover Manufacturing & Engine Co. of Freeport, Ill., except the foundry equipment.

A company spokesman said the purchase did not include any building of the Freeport concern, and that the machinery purchased would be removed to an unannounced plant for use in defense work.

Record Treasury Issue Quickly Oversold

Secretary Morgenthau last night announced quick over-subscription of the Treasury's record breaking $1,500,000,000 bond sale, which began yesterday morning.

As is usual in the case of the sale of Treasury bonds, Morgenthau said that midnight would be the deadline for the filing or mailing of subscriptions for the new bonds by would-be purchasers.

Morgenthau granted two extra days, however, for small investors who want to buy up to $5000 worth of bonds and are willing to wait 90 days before receiving the bonds and thus avoid any early speculation in them.

The bond sale was the largest single offering of Treasury securities for cash since the World War. The Treasury offered one billion dollars of 2½ per cent bonds maturing in from 1967 to 1972 and 500 million dollars of 2 per cent bonds maturing in from 1951 to 1955.

Morgenthau declined to comment on a statement earlier this week by Chairman George (Democrat), of Georgia, of the Senate Finance Committee, that "taxes are near the maximum."

Morgenthau, who was reported to be seeking approximately five billion dollars more in revenue, told a press conference he did not want to be drawn into any public discussion of taxes at the present time.

Retailers Allowed Tax Refunds on Nonpayments

The Treasury yesterday authorized refunds of the new retailers' excise taxes on furs, jewelry and toilet preparations in instances when customers fail to meet their payments on these articles.

Technically, a jeweler, for instance, who sells jewelry on time payments is supposed to pay a proportionate amount of the 10 per cent tax every time he collects an instalment. In practice, many jewelers pay the whole tax at the time of the sale, and the Treasury said these merchants were entitled to refunds in case the payments were not made.

RFC Funds to Build 3 New Aluminum Plants

Three, perhaps four, large aluminum plants costing $50,900,000 will be built in Los Angeles soon with Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds. The plants will have a combined output of about 600 million pounds annually.

H. T. Cory, supervising engineer of the Defense Plant Corporation, an RFC subsidiary, said the Aluminum Co. of America would build one of the plants. It would cost approximately 15 million dollars, have an output of 128 million pounds and use 130 million kilowatts of power annually. It would convert aluminuma, ore concentrates, into aluminum ingots.

Cory said the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Co., of Detroit, would construct an extrusion plant to transform ingots into airplane parts. The cost is estimated at $5,300,000.

A $5,600,000 forging plant, where giant steam hammers would pound aluminum into various shapes, would be the third. The construction company has not been selected.

The fourth plant, if constructed, would be a 22 million dollar rolling mill to make aluminum alloys for use in airplane construction.

Cory said work would start within two weeks on the Alcoa plant, to be completed by spring. Alcoa is building four other aluminum works for the Defense Plant Corporation—at Massena, N. Y., Troutdale, Oreg., Spokane, Wash., and Melvern, Ark.

Rubber Footwear Makers Asked to Defer Raises

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday asked 27 manufacturers of rubber footwear—overshoes, sandals, canvas rubber-soled shoes and specialty oxfords—to refrain from boosting prices above present levels.

Rapid price increases in almost all types of rubber footwear have been reported to the Office of Price Administration in recent months. Henderson said, and because they are purchased heavily by low and middle income groups, the effects are "disturbing to civilian morale and contribute to inflation."

The request was included in letters to manufacturers which disclosed that an investigation of recent price rises is under way. Not included in the Henderson action are leather or felt rubber-soled shoes.

Higher Labor Costs Cited as Prime Factor

Higher labor costs have replaced raw material price rises as the prime factor in making factory production more expensive, the National Industrial Conference Board reported yesterday after questioning business executives.

Six months ago a similar check showed that raw materials were the main cause of higher production costs.

The research organization said overtime payments and a decrease in efficiency caused by the employment of inexperienced workers were factors behind the higher labor costs.

Substitutes were another factor increasing the expenses of production, the survey showed, since they sometimes cost more than the ordinary materials and in some instances required new tools, dies and fixtures.

Executives differed on the question of passing increases on to consumers. Most agreed their ability to absorb further increases was limited but a few said it still was possible to absorb some. Competition and price ceilings were given as difficulties blocking advances in consumer costs.

New Evidence In A. G. E. Case Is Discounted

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 4.—Dennis J. Driscoll and Willard L. Thorp, trustees of the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, said in a statement today that testimony given yesterday in Federal Court by Albert Osborn, hand-writing expert, did not tend to establish that the corporation's securities were void and that holders of the fixed interest-bearing securities of Associated Gas & Electric Co., parent concern, held a priority to the assets of the A. G. E. Corporation.

In an A. G. E. reorganization hearing, Osborn had testified that minutes of directors' meetings of subsidiary companies which made possible the creation of the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation and the transfer of the corporation's stock were fictitious and written several years after the meeting supposedly were held. Osborn said certain of the minutes which were dated 1927 and 1928 actually were not written until late in 1931.

Messrs. Driscoll and Thorp said in their statement:

"The testimony in this case up to this point had been adduced by one side only, the trustee of Associated Gas & Electric Co. and the general protective committee. . . . Any attempt to evaluate the effect of the evidence in this proceeding on priorities or on the relative position of the various security holders of the two estates at this time is hazardous in the extreme.

"Any interpretation of Osborn's testimony is inaccurate, incomplete and misleading as would be almost any interpretation of an isolated part of evidence in any proceeding."

Rail Loadings Up 8.4% in Week

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 886,189 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was an increase of 66,803 cars, or 8.4 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 137,664 cars, or 18.9 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 180,693 cars, or 26.4 per cent, compared with 1939.

All classes or loadings except grain and ore showed increases over the preceding holiday week. Total loadings rose slightly more than seasonally.

Idle Reserves of Banks Show 60 Million Gain

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday estimated lendable excess reserves of banks increased 60 million dollars to a total of $3,860,000,000 in the week ended December 3. The increase was attributed primarily to Treasury spending.

$2 Dividend Of Allied Dye Tops New List

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 4.—The year end flow of special and increased dividens continued unabated today.

Allied Chemical & Dye Corp. voted a special distribution of $2 a common share, payable December 27 to holders of record December 13, making 1941 payments of $8 the same as paid in 1940.

Square "D" Co., makers of electrical equipment and aircraft precision instruments, declared a dividend of $1.50 a common share, bringing the year's total to $3 a share as against $2.80 in 1940. The dividend is payable December 24 to record December 13.

United States Rubber Co. directors authorized a dividend of $1.50 a share, payable December 22 to record December 15. Payment to 50 cents earlier this year was the first since 1921.

An extra dividend of 50 cents a common share, in addition to the regular 25 cents quarterly, was voted holders of Diamond "T" Motor Car Co. stock, raising 1941 payments to $1.50 a share from 25 cents in 1940. The dividends are payable December 22 to holders of record December 15.

Consolidated Coppermines Corp. declared a dividend of 25 cents a share, payable December 19 to holders of record December 13. Payments for 1941 will total 75 cents a share, compared with 50 cents in 1940.

Cannon Heads Loan League

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 4 (AP).—The United States Savings and Loan League today named Fermor S. Cannon, of Indianapolis, president.

New directors named were E. M. Van Norden, of New York; William E. Best, of Pittsburgh; Charles J. Bergmann, of Washington, and Halsey R. Hangar, of Dubuque, Ia.

Other officers chosen at the forty-ninth annual convention included first vice president, Ralph H. Cake, of Portland, Oreg.; second vice president, John F. Scott, of St. Paul, Minn., and secretary, Herman F. Cellarius, of Cincinnati. Cellarius was picked for the forty-sixth time.

Stocks Turn Irregular on Profit Taking

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 4.—Tax selling, profit chasing and a little more news skepticism today halted the recovery swing in the stock market.

At the start the list acted as though it would have no trouble extending the substantial advance of the preceding two sessions. Offerings then became more urgent and uneven trends developed after mid-day and persisted to the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished unchanged at 39.8. It had risen 1.1 points on Tuesday, after having failed to register a plus sign since November 21. For the third successive day volume topped the million-share mark. Transfers totaled 1,126,960 shares, compared with 1,090,790 yesterday and 1,182,240 the day before.

Gains, Losses Divided

While fractional advances were well distributed at the end—isolated favorites were up 1 to 3—there were almost as many declines.

Steels did nothing and rails generally were apathetic, with the exception of Union Pacific, which retained a half-point gain. Steels still were confronted with pig iron and scrap shortages and carriers had to contend with faint hopes of the roads getting freight rate increases sufficient to ease the recent big wage boost.

Oils, chemicals, mail orders and utilities did better than other groups. Dividends and earnings statements provided aid for individual issues.

Among favorites, Dow Chemical was up 3 and Allied Chemical 2¼. Others with lesser improvement included Standard Oil (N. J.), American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, Chrysler, United Aircraft, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester and Caterpillar Tractor.

Bonds Remain Firm

The bond market retained a high degree of composure today as the United States Treasury tapped the Nation's economic resources for $1,500,000,000—the largest amount ever drawn down at one time.

Corporate obligations tended a shade higher on average with the rails making the best showing; the foreign dollar department had many firm spots and prices of existing U. S. Government obligations held within ⅛ to ½ point of Wednesday's finals.

Most of the actual trading in the Treasury list centered on the taxable 2½s of 1967-72, which are identical with the new long term bonds the Treasury sold today. This issue closed over the counter at 101 20-32, compared with Wednesday's final bid of 102 10-32. The ideas of traders concerning the new 2s of 1951-'55, the intermediate part of today's offerings, was around 101¼. Most of the street expected books on the Treasury offerings would close tonight and trading on a when-issued basis would start with the offering on Friday.

Bethesda Five Faces N. T. S.

Game Today To Launch Cage Season

Only 3 Leftovers On Bethesda's Team; Action Slated to Begin at 3 P. M.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High cagemen officially launch the scholastic basketball schedule in this vicinity today when they play host to National Training School at the Bethesda gym at 3:30.

Except for three players, the 1941 Baron aggregation will be totally strange to local followers. The only performers from last year's outstanding crew are Dick Poerstel and Bob Cremins, forwards, and Center Clayton Rogers. Lost through graduation are such stars as Duke Hashagen, Elton McClure, Bobby Keene and Al Gaist. In all, the Barons saw 12 of the first 15 men on last year's squad graduate.

In the three leftovers and the remainder of his present squad, Coach Al Vogt believes he may come up with a powerful quintet. His record in the past indicates the team will boast more than its share of victories before the end of the season.

Whatever his starting lineup, Vogt is certain it will average 6 feet in height, considerably more weight than last year, and the usual fighting spirit. Tallest man on the squad is 6 feet 6 Haven Rettew, a transfer from Central, and filling out the first line are Bob Brewer, Harry Phillips, Carl Julian and Loring Appleby. None of these are less than 5 feet 11.

berlain-owned Kenwood Club, which he cited as an example and where he was formerly professional. A meeting of the entire membership will be called next week to discuss the preliminary plans.

Name Is Changed

In order to give the club an entire new start the original name of Beaver Dam will be changed to Prince Georges, as the success of the new venture will depend largely on residents of that county, in which the club is located. It is the only country club in the suburban county.

Houghton, whose abilities as a promotion man are exceeded only by his talents as a golf professional, has been professional at Beaver Dam for the past two years. He has worked in various pro and managerial capacities at several District clubs.

Bogley, who worked as Houghton's assistant and was in charge of the golf shop last year, in addition to continuing his private business in Bethesda, will devote his full time to the club. A manager will be named in a few days.

OUT HUNTING . .

With Jack Bell

Hunters and Anglers Weekend Weather Forecast

Rain with fresh southeast winds and mild temperature, Friday. Saturday, partly cloudy and mild with moderate shifting winds. Outlook for Sunday: occasional rains followed by colder temperature, with fresh southerly winds shifting to northwest.

It isn't too early to begin thinking about feeding wildlife during the coming winter. Every time we have a particularly severe winter we lose a great many birds and other game animals through starvation, freezing and predation. Natural enemies of game get in their best licks when protective cover is scarce and wildlife has to leave it in search of food. By systematically feeding quail, turkeys and other birds with grain, such as whole corn, we are able to save a lot of game which we need for brood stock in the spring.

JACK BELL

Food is plentiful, and so is cover, but if an effective winter feeding program is to be carried out later on, plans must be made right now. Wildlife won't travel far in search of food after being snowed in. It is a good idea to bait the areas where feeding is to be done so that the game will learn to seek food there. However, this should not be done if the game which is attracted is going to be hunted, since it is both unsportsmanlike and illegal to take game by the use of bait.

Plan your winter wildlife feeding program early, and encourage your sportsmen friends to do the same. You can save a lot of birds this winter if you do.

Around 40,000 acres of forest land, including some of the very best turkey areas in the State of Virginia, will be thrown open to hunters on December 8 when the one-week hunting season on the Appomattox-Buckingham, Cumberland, and Prince Edward State Forests begins. These forests, which are controlled by the Virginia State forest service, are opened to controlled hunting each year under a cooperative wildlife management agreement between the forest service and commission of game and inland fishris.

The wild turkey population on the forests is one of the highest to b found on any public hunting ground in the United States, according to biologists of the State game commission. Quail, rabbits, and squirrels are also hunted on the forests . . . but the shooting of grouse and deer is not permitted.

Special bag limits have been set for the areas. Only one turkey may be shot by a hunter during the week. The limit on quail is six a day, 24 during the week. Six rabbits and six squirrels will be allowed each day. Regulations for other species will conform to the State game laws.

Permits, which cost $1, must be obtained by sportsmen who hunt in the forests. Funds derived from the sale of these permits are used in gam management work on the three forest areas. Hunters may obtain permits from the forest service office in Farmville, from the Ranger headquarters on the Cumberland Forest, from the game commission office in Richmond, or at any of the five hunter contact stations on the forests.

The Virginia commission of game and inland fisheries can supply rabbits for restocking between now and the first of January, but although wardens have been asked to contact landowners who want rabbits only a few applications for the cotton tails have been received. The rabbits may be released on suitable areas where the land owner agrees that they are not to be shot this season. Arrangements have been made for trapping wild rabbits in areas where they are plentiful, and transporting them to lands where more rabbits are desired. Since it is difficult to obtain rabbits late in the winter, applications should be sent in early so that deliveries may be made by the first of January.

Golden Gloves Open Tonight At Uline Arena

Nine popular local and suburban clubs and unattached entries as well will be represented at Uline's Arena tonight when the annual Golden Gloves boxing tournament is inaugurated with a marathon schedule of 24 novice bouts at 8:30 o'clock.

Youngsters from all sections of the city will be included in the first night's activities, and some of the wildest swinging and merriest mixing in the history of this competition appears likely.

A grand total of 125 novices, far and away the largest field in the tournament's history, will compete in the Golden Gloves this year, 99 contestants having weighed in at the boxing commission's office last Wednesday night and the remainder being granted special permission to be examined later.

No fewer than nine of tonight's contestants are to represent the National Training School. Boys Club of Washington, Merrick Club, United Service Organization, Red Shield A. C., Apollo A. C., Jewish Community Center, Prince Georges County Police Boys' Club, Metropolitan Police Boys Club and St. Mary's Club, of Alexandria, all will sponsor entries.

The Golden Gloves bouts are to proceed on a staggered schedule, being continued on December 12-19 and concluded on January 2-9.

One of the most colorful new teams stepping out in tonight's will be United Service Organization, directed by Gerry Strang, formerly a boxing and football standout at Catholic U. No fewer than nine service athletes have been enrolled by Strang.

Officials said they were advised of the sale by President Hector Racine, who is attending the minor league convention at Jacksonville, Fla.

Jensen, who had been with the Royals for one season, batted .294 and drove in 72 runs last year.

Williams' 410 Count Leads D. C. Pinmen

H. Williams, of Police No. 1, with a 162 game and 410 set topped the District Government League at Brookland and sparked a three-game win over Police No. 7 and high team set for the night of 1787. The Traffic boys, with Lee O'Neill shooting a 388 set, took the odd tilt from Pumping Station No. 1, and posted high team game of 644.

PETWORTH

Wally Reid's 161-379 for Sollers Plumbing and Paul Bartlett's 130-380 topped the Petworth League with the latter's Petworth Bowling Center team taking high game after a 606 pinfall. Ed Payne helped his Cochran's Restaurant team into first place with a sweep over Bill Jawish Service, while Bill Oliff's 135-368 aided in a two-game win by York Haberdashery over City Awning.

MODEL BASIN

GEORGETOWN

The Georgetown Independent League found Larry Smith, Hoya Inn, the best duckpinner on the drives when he came through with a 137 game and 382 set to lead a three-game win over Warring Barrel to go into first by a one-game margin. The Hoya boys also posted the team highs, a 576 game and 1665 set.

INTERIOR

A 150 game by Harold Brown, of Bituminous Coal and a 392 set by Mike Umali, of Petroleum Coal sparked the Interior League at Penn Recreation with the latter's team taking the highs after pinfalls of 637 and 1779, also winning three from Reclamation No. 1 to move into first place. Reclamation No. 2 and National Capital Parks scored respective sweeps over Construction and Fisheries.

LADIES' FEDERAL

Dorothy Aue, of OEM No. 1, with 142, and Inez Bryan, of GPO, with 391, topped the Ladies' Federal League at Arcadia, with the ICC girls taking the team highs after counts of 570, 1606, which also included two games from Treasury No. 1.

Hockey Eagles Host Tonight To Orioles

Wide open hockey involving two high-scoring combinations will be featured at Riverside Stadium tonight when Coach Redvers Mackenzie's Washington Eagles entertain Elmer Piper's strengthened Baltimore Orioles in the second game of their intercity and Eastern Hockey League feud at 8:30 o'clock.

Ten per cent of the gross receipts will be donated to the Smokes for Yanks Fund and indications are that the largest crowd of the season thus far will be in attendance.

The Orioles, a recent 14-to-7 victim of the champions at Riverside, are coming back tonight with three new players. Bald-pated Frank Gresnick and picturesque George Kolwuniemi, early season favorites with the Washington Lions, both have been reinstated as amateurs and will play tonight. So will another new player acquired last weekend.

Baltimore served notice on the Eagles last Sunday night when it turned back Atlantic City, twice conqueror of the locals, 8 to 5. The Orioles impressed as a formidable combination in their debut here, but lacked the man power.

Set New Record

The invaders will bring back their great scoring line of Andy Chakowski, center, and Reds McClure and Ab McDougall, wingmen. In last week's high scoring game here McDougall set a new individual scoring record for Riverside Stadium when he netted five goals. Kenny Ullyot scored four goals and an assist and Len Burrage three goals and two assists for the Eagles.

The Orioles and Eagles trampled team scoring records into discard when the champions turned in a total of 14 goals and they combined to produce an aggregate of 21.

Baltimore tonight will bring back its colorful brother act of Gerry and Maurice Archambault, fleet wingmen; a burly, bad man and human sparkplug in Mayer Flett, defenseman, and a 140-pound, acrobatic and crowd-pleasing goalie in Roy Roche.

The Eagles, aroused over their 2 to 3 loss to Atlantic City which terminated their streak at three consecutive victories last Tuesday, will come back at full strength tonight. Tommy McCormack, opportune scoring center and winger, returns to the game after a lay-off occasioned by an injury to his right leg after crashing into the boards against these same Orioles last week.

Crossing Officer For 12 Years Asks Retirement Dec. 31

Fearful a petition by 2000 school children protesting his forced retirement would cause ill-feeling in the Police Department, Private William D. Cousins, 66, yesterday requested retirement.

He submitted his request to Inspector Harvey G. Callahan, chief of personnel, to become effective December 31.

Cousins, on leave until then, said he would rather retire voluntarily than be forced out by the Commissioners' new compulsory 64-year-old retirement order.

He explained he is apprehensive about the petition tendered Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, two weeks ago. The petition signed by pupils and teachers of St. Martin's, Langley and McKinley Schools, asked that Cousins "be continued in service," because for the last 12 years he has been a crossing officer at Lincoln Road and T Street Northeast, protecting the lives of thousands of school children at the hazardous intersection.

The committee also will consider the "charity racket" bill, which requires all charity organizations to obtain a license from the District government and submit an annual report on their activities.

Contract Bridge

New players, and some of us who aren't so new, are likely to get excited when playing a slam contract and rush out aces and kings before realizing that serious business must be done before the 12 tricks can be taken.

One principle to remember is to develop the suit in which the greatest number of tricks can be won at once, before the adversaries can do any damage. Consider this hand:

West	East
♠ A K 7	♠ Q J 6 5
♡ A K 4 3	♡ 8 2
◇ A K 7	◇ 6 4
♣ 9 8 7	♣ K Q J 10 3

You are West and declarer at six no trump; North has led a small heart. You can count eight top tricks: four spades, two hearts and two diamonds. There also are four additional tricks to be had in the club suit as soon as the ace is removed from the enemy.

It is not likely that any of us would be so foolish as to take out our top hearts or diamonds before playing clubs, but there might be some who would run off the four top spades.

This would be disastrous, as one opponent might have the club ace guarded twice; then, if there were no means of entering dummy with a spade honor, he would simply refuse to take his ace until the third round and declarer would be shut off from his two good clubs, which would ring down an untimely curtain on the slam.

Listen! with Glynn

If any of you have been wondering what ever happened to a girl name of Shirley Temple, it can now be announced that she's merely been rehearsing for a new radio show.

With a certain obviousness, it must be admitted, the series is to be called "Shirley Temple Time" and the first program is to be heard over WJSV and the Columbia network at 10 p. m. tonight—even if that does seem a little late for Shirley to be up. But then, come to think of it, it will only be 7 p. m. in Hollywood, so everything should be all right, after all.

The play, especially written for the occasion by Harry Kronman, is titled "A Bonnet for Joan" and has something to do with the activities of a motherless daughter and her father.

The father is to be played by a gentleman named Warner Baxter, who has appeared in pictures previously with Miss Temple. All the male stars who are to appear with Miss Temple, in fact, are gentlemen who have been seen in pictures with her. For instance, Robert Young is to do the honors next week, and on succeeding weeks there will be Lionel Barrymore and Humphrey Bogart.

In addition to all this there will be music provided by Billy Artzt's Orchestra and the Quintones, that being a five-voiced harmony group of three girls and two boys.

That will be "Shirley Temple Time."
